COMMENT OF THE DAY

NATO TALKS

THE decision to hold a "summit" conference of the North Atlantic Organization powers is welcome as it is the first since the alliance was founded eight years ago in the conviction, brought home at that time by the Communist push in Czechoslovakia, that the North Atlantic countries must hang together at all costs.

Today the life or death matter has been brought home more sharply than ever by Russia's announcement that it not only had an intercontinental ballistic missile, but that it had also launched two space satellites which destroyed the last illusions of Western superiority in the field of science.

Talks between the British and French Governments and between the French and United States Governments have a high priority on the list of diplomatic moves but these have necessarily been held up owing to the French Cabinet crisis.

INDICATIONS

THERE are indications, however, that the French Premier-elect, M. Felix Gaillard, might gain a working majority today and provided he does he should be well acquainted with the problems facing the NATO countries before the conference in December.

The main subjects for discussion are doubtless the adaptation of the defence strategy of NATO's armed forces to the latest threat of intercontinental ballistic missiles and to consequences that can be drawn from the launching of the satellites.

It is to be hoped that by the time the conference is held considerable progress is made towards reaching an understanding between London, Washington and Paris about sharing interrelated atomic knowledge and atomic arms. President Eisenhower's determination, following his talks with Mr Macmillan, to effect the repeal or modification of the McMahon Act, seems to indicate that there is every possibility of success in this direction with ultimate benefit to the allied partners.

REPORT

IT is believed that the NATO Supreme Commander, General Lauris Norstad, has already submitted a detailed report for streamlining his forces in Europe in accordance with modern weapon techniques that will make a small reduction in the number of men possible.

Such a reduction would be possible because of the integration of atomic weapons in the forces which started in 1954 and has gone on progressively ever since and has greatly increased the firing power of General Norstad's army.

STRATEGY

IF the Supreme Commander's plan is approved by the heads of state at the summit conference, the overall strategy will fall into line with Britain's decision to reduce her forces on the Continent.

While Britain is not yet contributing towards the supply of atomic weapons in Europe the difficulties arising from the distribution of them have not seriously interfered with the streamlining plan. This degree of co-operation must continue, but there is still room for further cohesion and understanding and this can be brought about by the heads of state at their meeting.

UK SCIENTISTS TO FLY TO US

Joint Scientific Staff Mooted TO AVOID DUPLICATION

By CHAPMAN PINCHER

London, Nov. 4.

The strongest team of British defence scientists ever assembled is to fly to Washington within the next few days. Its purpose—to expedite the Macmillan-Eisenhower plan for meeting the challenge of the Russian space satellite and other advances with major Anglo-American efforts in science.

Sir Frederick Brundrett, Chief Scientist at the Defence Ministry, will almost be certain to lead the team which will include Sir William Penney, Director of Atomic Weapons, and Dr Robert Cockburn, Guided Rocket Chief.

Dr George Gardner, Chief of the Royal Aircraft Establishment, will be going to Washington simultaneously, and Sir John Carroll, Scientific Adviser to the Admiralty, may go, representing naval interests.

Main Task

The scientists' main task is to plan the setting up of a combined scientific staff to share out defence projects so that costly duplication can be avoided. An equally high-powered team of United States scientists will visit London soon afterwards.

A drastic revision of the defence projects which are far advanced is expected to result from the talks. The manufacture of atomic bombs and rockets will be shared out so both countries will make weapons for different purposes.

The revolutionary plans outlined in the Government's last Defence White Paper are likely to be reshaped with accent on future economies cuts. Big changes in RAF and Royal Navy are expected to follow.

Bargaining Weapons

The British team hopes to take to America exciting new achievements in H-bomb research as bargaining weapons. The new series of British bomb tests near Christmas Island is scheduled to start this week. No United States observers are allowed in these tests.

The possibility of allowing the Americans the use of Woomera rocket range in Australia is a further British and Commonwealth bargaining asset. The United States firing of ballistic rockets in Florida has had to be carried out before many uninvited spectators along the coast.

The Queen To Open Parliament Today

TORY'S NEW MEASURES

London, Nov. 4.

Queen Elizabeth drives in State to Parliament tomorrow to open a new session charged with serious problems for the Conservative Government.

The Monarch's speech from the throne—written for her by Mr Harold Macmillan's cabinet—will foreshadow various new measures designed to lighten the burden of old age pensioners and improve the nation's local government system.

ANXIOUS MOOD

But its chief theme is expected to be Britain's continuing fight to quell inflation and maintain the strength of the pound sterling—money unit of the world's largest trading area, including most of the nations of the Commonwealth.

The Government's struggle to right the economy is at present complicated by a clash with Britain's powerful trade unions, which claim Mr Macmillan's administration has provoked the country's present economic difficulties by mishandled policy. Conservatives return to the House of Commons in anxious mood. A long line of Parliamentary by-elections this year has shown their party's popularity with voters slumping sharply—with the cost of living apparently the chief cause of defection from their ranks.

The Prime Minister tonight gave a dinner party for all his House of Commons Ministers, and told them the gist of the proposals that will be contained in the Queen's speech. He will address Parliament tomorrow after the Monarch has spoken in a wide-ranging speech which politicians expect may contain some reference to Russia's new scientific advances, including the new dog-carrying Sputnik.—Reuter.

GIRL TUGS LION'S MANE AND ...

Tokyo, Nov. 4.
Miss Yaeiko Ono should have known better than to play with a real lion—bars in between or not.
Knocking off from work at a snack bar near the Yachikawa US Air Force Base in Tokyo where she is a waitress, girl with a cup or two of excess alcohol inside her, she passed by a lion's cage of a circus lying on an open lot late last night.

She climbed over the fence with the sign "Danger Keep Out," circling the cage and extended a hand inside.
She grabbed the lion's mane and pulled to see how he would react.

The lion roared once and snapped off three fingers of her hand with his powerful jaws and teeth. A huge paw dragged her shoulder half inside the cage, making eight deep gashes on her body with talons.
She is expected to live after emergency treatment at a hospital.—France-Press.

FRENCH CRISIS EXPECTED TO END

MICHEL LELEU

Paris, Nov. 4.

French Premier-designate M. Felix Gaillard will go before the National Assembly tomorrow for an investiture vote that is expected to bring an end to France's 36-day-old government crisis, one of the longest of the Fourth Republic.

M. Gaillard, Finance Minister in the outgoing government, has been practically assured of the participation in his cabinet of all major French political parties, with the exception of the Communists and the right-wing "Poujadists."

ARBITER

His success in getting the co-operation of the usually hostile Socialists and Conservatives—Independents was due in part to the fact that he belongs to the Radical-Socialist Party which traditionally plays the role of arbiter between the "left" and the "right."

Part of his success was due also to the fact that M. Gaillard was not involved in the bitter internal struggle that have torn the Radical Socialist Party over the past two years.

THE CABINET

In the Gaillard cabinet, it was expected, Socialists Christian Pineau and Robert Leese would retain their respective posts as Minister of Foreign Affairs and Minister of Algeria.

Members of the mainly Catholic Popular Republic Movement, possibly Pierre Pflimlin and former Premier Robert Schuman were expected to occupy the posts of Minister of Finance and Minister of Justice.

Members of the Independents would head the Ministries of Reconstruction, Agriculture and Labour, informed sources believed.—France-Press.

SPUTNIK II LAUNCHED: WALL STREET LOSES

New York, Nov. 4.

News of the launching of Sputnik II caused losses on the New York Stock Market today but some recovery was registered in later dealings. Shares in companies concerned with aircraft and missile production, however, showed some gain. Trading was heavy in the morning but fell off in the afternoon. The ticker fell behind early but caught up later.—Reuter.

'I Would Do It Again'

London, Nov. 4.

Field Marshal Sir John Harding, who is retiring as Governor of Cyprus, as of December 1, returned here today. He told the press: "If I had my time over again, and circumstances were the same, I would, speaking generally, make the same major decisions and follow the same general policy."

He said that he was not completely satisfied with the results of his mission.—France-Press.

Russia Withdraws From Disarmament Commission

United Nations, Nov. 4.

Russia declared today that it will no longer participate in the UN Disarmament Commission and its five-nation Subcommittee as they are now constituted.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vasily V. Kuznetsov said in the Disarmament debate that his Government considers "that all attempts to make use of the Disarmament Subcommittee for productive work have been entirely exhausted."

"Under these conditions the Soviet Government does not see any sense in further participation in the work of the disarmament commission and its subcommittee," he told the General Assembly's Main Political Committee.

A Resolution

Kuznetsov's declaration came as Russia seeking to head off the Disarmament Committee to endorsement of iron-clad positions, circulated among delegations a resolution asking that ten proposals previously submitted be sent to the five-nation Subcommittee—comprising the United States, Russia, Britain, France and Canada—for further consideration.

Kuznetsov said the West has delivered "an ultimatum" to the Subcommittee in its disarmament proposals offered in London last April.

"Advancing these unacceptable proposals," he said, "the Western powers insist on their adoption as a whole, declaring that they—that is, the Western powers—cannot agree to the solution of some or other important questions of disarmament separately, even to the solution of such an urgent problem as that of discontinuing tests of atomic and hydrogen weapons."

Fruitless

"One cannot fail to see that such an approach makes all future negotiations on disarmament completely fruitless," Kuznetsov said. Russia did not reject further disarmament negotiations, providing "constructive proposals" are forthcoming from the United States, Britain and France. He said Russia was ready to negotiate a disarmament settlement as a whole "as well as on its individual aspects" or to "solve this problem on a regional basis, for example, with regard to Europe, East, Near and Middle East countries."—United Press.

Overthrow Plot Uncovered

Managua, Nov. 4.

The Nicaraguan Government announced today the discovery of a political military plot to overthrow the government of President Luis Somoza Debayle. An official statement said the revolutionaries had planned to bombard the Presidential Palace and several important districts in Managua, profiting from the absence of General Anastasio Somoza Jr., Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces, who left today for an official visit to the United States.

The announcement said that the conspirators had been arrested yesterday.—France-Press.

Missing Girl Returns

Nottingham, Nov. 4.

An all-night search for a 17-year-old Jamaican girl missing from a hospital here ended this morning when she staggered, exhausted, aboard a bus. She was too ill to give any explanation for her flight from the hospital.

The girl is a patient at Nottingham City Hospital. She left the hospital last night wearing only a night dress and bed jacket. During the night, hall and street fell for several hours. When she boarded the bus this morning, the driver took her to a police station.—United Press.

Britain Rejects Soviet Proposal To Abolish Commission

New York, Nov. 4.

Commander Allan Noble, British Minister of State, today rejected the Soviet draft proposal to abolish the present UN Disarmament Commission and the Subcommittee and establish instead a permanent commission made up of all 82 United Nations members.

He also said, in the UN Political Committee, that Britain did not support the Indian plan to expand the Subcommittee. This was never meant to be a representative body, he said. It was intended to be a small body and pursue negotiations in private.

SHOULD CONTINUE

The Indian delegate, Mr Krishna Menon, had rightly emphasised the responsibility of the four great powers, he said, and it was therefore logical that the Subcommittee continue as it was.

Commander Noble said Mr Kuznetsov's statement that the Soviet Union would not participate in the Commission and the Subcommittee was "a most discouraging development." Britain would "revert on it" and he might have to ask to speak again.

Britain and the other sponsors of the 24-nation draft were asking the Assembly to endorse the principles of a plan which was the fruit of long and patient effort and which they believed was "the most fair and balanced plan on disarmament yet proposed."

RIGHT PATH

They realised that no plan could be imposed on any state against its will but by voting in favour of the 24-power draft he believed the Assembly would set the negotiations on the right path, the only path likely to lead to disarmament.

Mr Wallace Nesbitt, the Canadian delegate, said he would abstain from commenting on the Soviet announcement regarding the Disarmament Commission and Subcommittee beyond saying he was "shocked and disappointed" at this ultimatum, particularly in view of the manifest desire of this committee to make progress in the problem of disarmament.—Reuter.

RIISING FLU INCIDENCE

Manila, Nov. 5.

The rising influenza incidence in Manila during the past four weeks has alarmed Philippine health officials who fear a recurrence of the flu epidemic here similar to that now affecting Japan.

Manila's city health officer, Dr Mariano Icasiano, yesterday said that he was waiting for more details of the present flu plague in Japan prior to mapping out proper control measures here. He said that the Manila Health Department had abandoned plans to screen all Philippine tourists coming from Japan since this had proved ineffective.—France-Press.

Trial Rumours

Budapest, Nov. 4.

Rumours that a verdict had already been reached in the trial of four Hungarian writers taking place behind closed doors in Budapest, were not confirmed today.

New reports circulated today, indicating that the verdict had been held up, and that it might finally be milder than had been feared.—France-Press.

COLONY'S

REFUGEES

United Nations, Nov. 4.

The Chinese Nationalists today renewed its appeal that the United Nations grant assistance to the more than 700,000 anti-Communist refugees living in Hongkong.

Cheng Pao-nan, Chinese Nationalist representative on the UN Economic and Social Council, said it was "unthinkable" that the UN would continue to neglect the refugees.

Mr Cheng's appeal marked the sixth consecutive year that the refugees' plight has been brought before the UN. In each instance, however, the UN has hesitated to act in as much as the refugees have fled from a Government which is not recognised by the United Nations.

HUMANITARIAN

The Chinese delegate conceded that from a legal standpoint the mandate of the UN High Commissioner, But he argued that from a humanitarian point of view it was difficult to continue to neglect the refugees because of a legal technicality.

Mrs Walter Elliot, of the United Kingdom, said the refugees had resulted in a "colossal problem" for the British authorities. Representing a quarter of the population, they had become a "continuing and growing burden" on the Hongkong administration, Mrs Elliot said.

The British delegate said Hongkong authorities had resettled some of the refugees. Still to be resettled, she said, were an estimated 262,000 squatters, 64,000 roof-top dwellers and 14,000 who sleep in the street.

SORELY NEEDED

Mrs Elliot said a number of private voluntary agencies had provided valuable economic assistance to the refugees, most of whom are destitute. But she said additional aid was sorely needed.

"My Government and the authorities in Hongkong will continue to do their utmost to relieve the suffering while hoping that others will come to realise that it is of concern to them, too," the British delegate said.—United Press.

JOE LOUIS' MARRIAGE FINISHED

Chicago, Nov. 4.

Former heavyweight champion Joe Louis' third marriage ended today in separation.

Mrs Louis, the former Rose Morgan of New York City, said they had reached a friendly agreement on a trial basis because their business interests are in separate cities.

Mrs Louis runs a profitable cosmetic manufacturing firm and beauty salon in New York City. Louis is in the milk business here.

NO CLAIMS

Attorney Aaron H. Payne said the couple signed an agreement to relinquish any claims on the other's estate or to accept any responsibility for the other's debts.

Louis is heavily in debt to the Federal Government for income taxes. The couple was married on Christmas Day, 1955.—United Press.

Uranium Belt

Columbus, Nov. 4.

Discovery of a uranium belt worth billions of dollars and extending from Lake Erie to the Ohio River and into West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee was reported here today. It was estimated that a thousand billion tons of the uranium-bearing shale and sandstone lie under Ohio alone.—United Press.

JORDAN LASHES BACK AT EGYPT: NASSER FLAYED

Cairo Accused Of Showering Amman With Lies

Amman, Jordan, Nov. 4.

The Jordan Government tonight accused Egyptian leaders of treason to the Arab cause, and said it had evidence of secret Egyptian-Israeli contacts.

An official statement issued by the Government spokesman denied Egyptian newspaper allegations of Jordan-Israeli Government contacts and accused Cairo of showering Jordan with "lies."

The statement said the Egyptians had surrendered the Gaza Strip to Israel, opened the Suez Canal to Israeli navigation, and allowed Israeli military camps inside their territory.

Accusing the Egyptian rulers of "political and moral degradation," the spokesman said:

"Responsible Egyptians are carrying out secret communications and contacts with the Israelis and committing treason and intrigues, of which we possess large quantities of evidence."

"We are still hesitating to reveal this in order to protect the reputation of the Egyptian rulers and their henchmen," he added.

The Jordan Government radio tonight also attacked Egypt's President Nasser and his Government, and accused pro-Egyptians of having spread subversion and destruction in Jordan during last April's incidents here.—Reuter.

Her Title And Coat Of Arms —For A Bag Of Sweets

Copenhagen, Nov. 4.

An impoverished, 82-year-old Italian countess, who craves only the luxury of an occasional bag of sweets, has offered an hereditary title and coat-of-arms to any Danish citizen who will support her.

The Countess, Elisabeth Clarice de Rio Spino, whose story appeared in Danish newspaper today, made the offer recently in a letter to the editor of the Danish provincial newspaper, Fyens Tidende.

She said she wished to adopt a Dane who, in return for supporting her for the rest of her life, would receive the title "Count de Rio Spino," her family documents, coat-of-arms and the right to pass on the title to his children.

The Countess, who now lives near Villach, Austria, is an Italian citizen and cannot by Italian law pass on her title to an adopted Italian. But she can do so to a foreigner.

An Austrian friend of the Countess said today that she did not require much money, but wanted just enough to allow herself the luxury of buying an occasional bag of sweets for her bad throat.

"She is too poor to buy them now," the friend added.—China Mail Special.

American Interest

Kuala Lumpur, Nov. 4.

American financiers are showing a keen desire to invest in newly-independent Malaya, official quarters here said today.

These quarters said that two private American banks were to send representatives to Malaya shortly to study business prospects and economic conditions.—France-Press.

PRINCESS MARGARET TO VISIT GUIANA

London, Nov. 4.

Princess Margaret will pay a short visit to British Guiana after inaugurating the Federal Legislature of the West Indies in Trinidad next April, it was announced from Clarence House here tonight.

It was announced in August that the Princess, as the Queen's special representative, will inaugurate the Federal Legislature of the West Indies in Trinidad on April 22.

The Princess spent a month touring the West Indies in 1955.

A Colonial Office spokesman said later that Princess Margaret would be the first member of the Royal Family to visit Guiana since it was ceded to Britain in 1814-15.

Guiana—the word means "Land of Waters"—is the only British possession in South America.

Most of the Colony's population, of more than 450,000, live on coastal stretches of flat land, much of it below sea level.—Reuter.

Tension In Djakarta Europeans Fear Further Violence

Djakarta, Nov. 4.

Australians in Djakarta said today they feared for the safety of their families if Indonesian demonstrations over Dutch West New Guinea intensified.

Some businessmen and technical experts working in Djakarta said they were considering whether to send their wives and children back to Australia.

Dutch nationals also told reporters they were worried that Indonesian youths would further damage their property.

Gangs of teenage vandals have plastered foot-high anti-Dutch slogans over the homes and offices of foreigners, including Dutch, Americans and Australians.

The Australian Trade Commission in Djakarta's main street has remained daubed with tar paint for a week.

CAMPAIGN

Organisers of Indonesian youth in a campaign to stir popular support for the Dutch territory to which Indonesia claims sovereignty have apologized for the appearance of slogans on non-Dutch property.

Cabinet Ministers heading the campaign have announced that "second and third waves" would be timed this month for the United Nations debate on West Irian.

Hundreds of Europeans in Djakarta, anxious to avoid possible trouble, are staying in their homes at night.

Shipping companies reported today there had been no significant increase in the number of persons wishing to leave Djakarta.—Reuter.

Mansfield Compliments The Queen

London, Nov. 4.

Jayne Mansfield, 24-year-old blonde American film star, met Queen Elizabeth tonight at the Royal Film Performance in London's West End and told her: "You are looking so beautiful."

The Queen, to whom the stars were presented after the showing of the film "Les Girls," smiled and replied: "Thank you very much indeed. So are you."

The Queen wore a full-length, shimmering evening dress of white tulle, heavily encrusted with diamonds and a silver fox cape. A diamond and aquamarine tiara and necklace completed her outfit.

Miss Mansfield drew many gasps with a form-fitting champagne-colored jersey silk gown.—Reuter.

Ike Calls Special Cabinet Meeting

Washington, Nov. 4.

President Eisenhower has called a Cabinet meeting for tomorrow, the White House said today.

In doing so he departed from usual custom. Cabinet meetings are normally held once a week, on Fridays.

It was announced at the State Department that because of the Cabinet session, Mr. John Foster Dulles, the Secretary of State, would not be able to give his usual Tuesday press conference at the regular time tomorrow morning—although he might be able to give it later in the day.

NO INDICATION

There was no immediate indication from White House officials of the reason for tomorrow's unusual Cabinet session.

The White House announced later today that a second Cabinet meeting would be held on Friday, in addition to the meeting scheduled for tomorrow (at 1400 GMT).

Mrs. Ann Whitton, the acting White House press secretary, said that the two Cabinet meetings did not indicate anything in the nature of an emergency. Asked whether the extra meeting had anything to do with the launching of the Soviet Union's second earth satellite yesterday, she said: "No, it does not."—Reuter.

Ben-Gurion Improves

Jerusalem, Nov. 4.

The condition of Israeli Premier David Ben-Gurion, who was wounded when a man tossed a grenade into the Israeli Parliament last Tuesday, was continuing to improve today.

Officials of the Zef Hospital where the Premier is being treated said that Ben-Gurion, who is 72, was however still suffering from emotional shock and from a post-operative fever which developed after pieces of grenade were extracted from his hands and legs.—France-Press.

Sputnik
Briefs

Paris, Nov. 4. The Paris newspaper "Aurore" today published a photo of a tough-looking bulldog who was shown talking over a long-distance telephone to the canine passenger in Sputnik II.

The bulldog had a Soviet police cap perched on its head with a "CP" (Communist Party) badge on it. According to "Aurore" it was telling the Sputnik dog: "O.K. Comrade, but watch out for the cull of personality."—United Press.

Warsaw, Nov. 4. These jokes were being told—by whistlers here tonight about the second Soviet Sputnik.

October 4, the day on which the first Sputnik was launched, will be proclaimed in Poland as National Day. (Population that day Albania (population one million) ceased to be the smallest satellite of the Soviet Union.)

Said Sputnik: "I would rather burst than go back to the USSR."—China Mail Special.

Calo, Nov. 4. Anglo-American dog lovers' protests against the launching of "Laika" are drawing little sympathy here today.

The reason is that Moslem religion considers the dog "unclean" and one of the lowest members of the animal kingdom.

Most Moslems try to avoid any direct contact with dogs, and Moslem rites provide that a man must wash before attending to a dog. He has brushed past a dog on the street.—United Press.

Honolulu, Nov. 4. Communications men in the Pacific trying to monitor Sputnik II were disappointed when an unknown amateur came up on the 20 megacycle band and transmitted "Bow-wow-wow" in Morse code.—United Press.

New York, Nov. 4. The Russians, who placed a living dog in the second earth satellite, were picketed by dogs today.

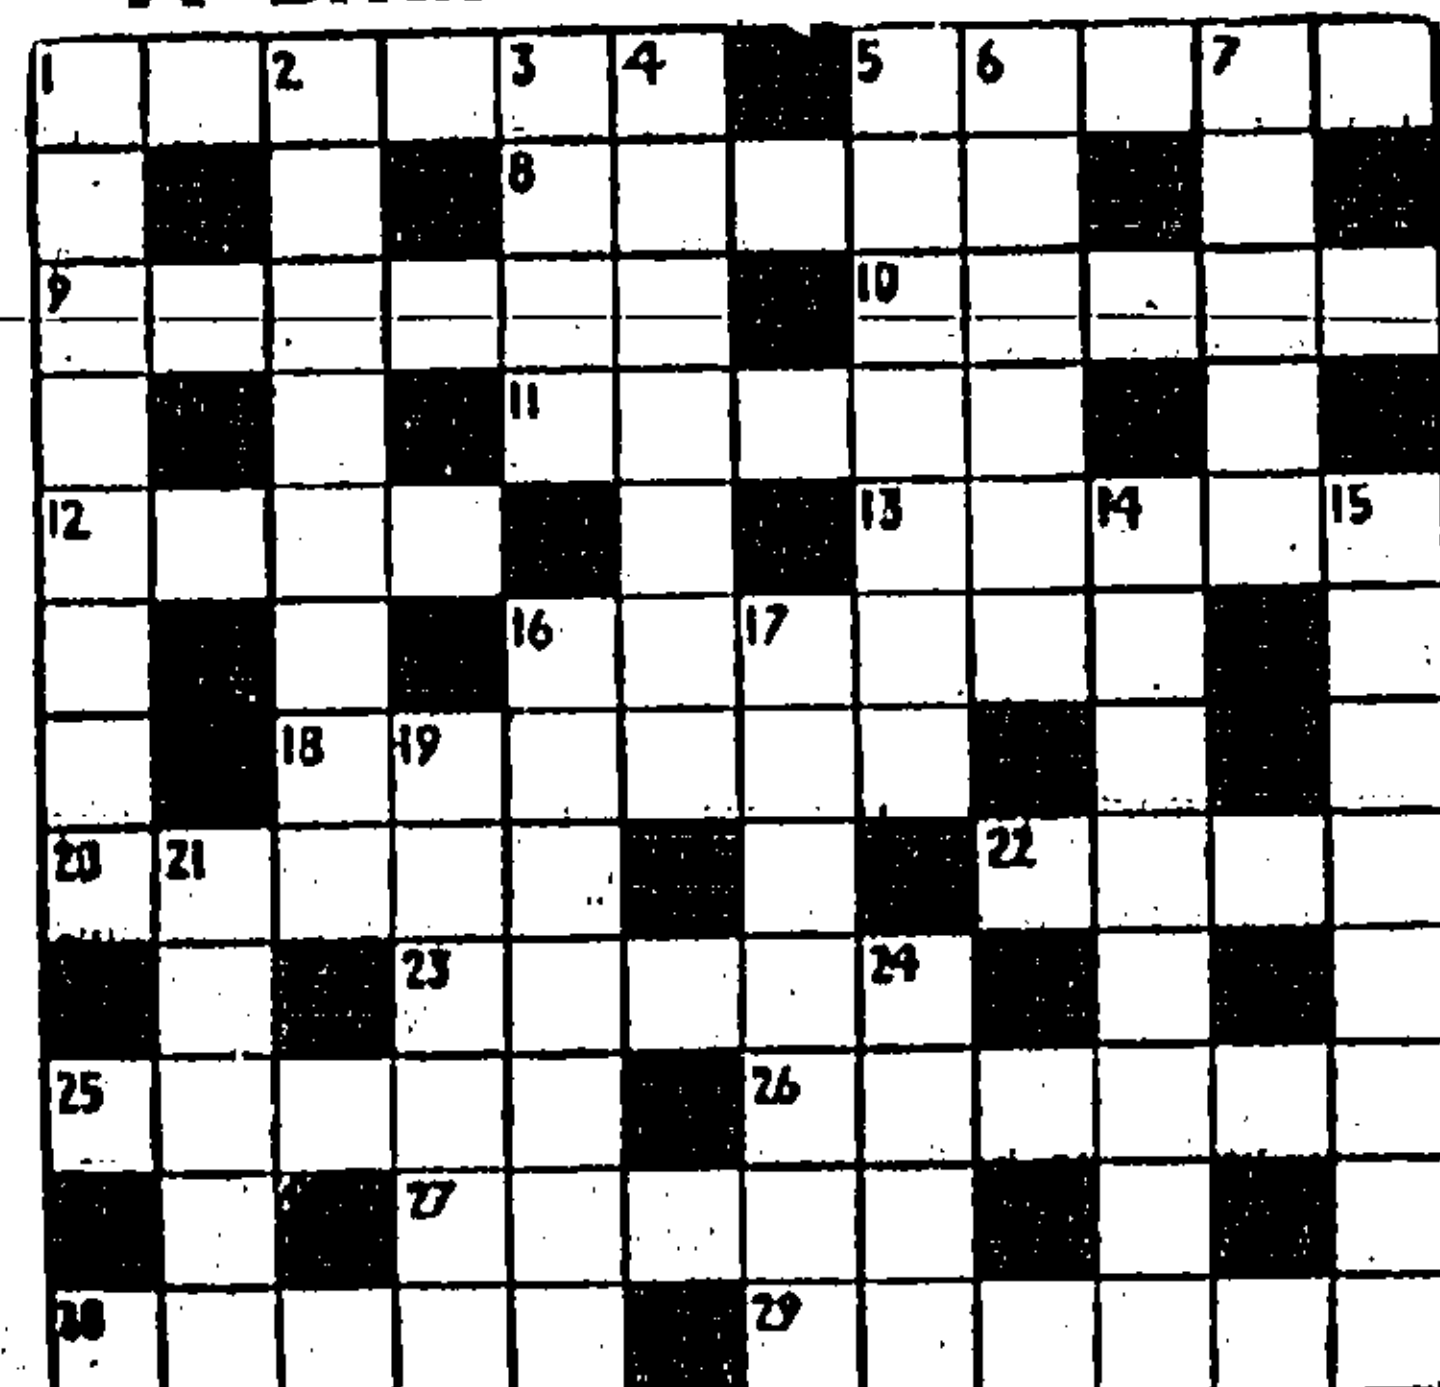

New York animal lovers led six dogs, carrying placards condemning the Russian action, back and forth along First Avenue opposite the United Nations today.

If the Russian delegation to the UN noticed the picketing, they gave no outward sign.—United Press.

Washington, Nov. 4. The Air Force released today the purchase of four black bears, but emphatically denied that the animals are destined for flights into space.

A spokesman said the man-sized 150-170-pound animals will join the collection of wild life used at the Aero-medical field laboratory at Holloman Air Force Base, New Mexico.—United Press.

Twenty-four Hours Above The Earth

'Laika' The Space Dog Is Still Alive

EXPERIMENTS SHOW THAT ANIMAL HAS
CHANCE TO RETURN

Moscow, Nov. 4. Russian Sputnik scientists reported tonight that the world famous "Dog in the Satellite" was still alive some 24 hours after being rocketed into space.

The condition of the animal is "satisfactory," the scientific team handling Sputnik II reported, according to Tass.

The statement said: "During the past 24 hours from the moment of the launching of the second satellite off the earth, the condition of the animal—the dog—placed in a specially equipped hermetically-sealed cabin was satisfactory."

Tass said: "This has been confirmed by data received on the heartbeats, blood pressure and other physiological indications."

The mystery surrounding the dog's name was settled tonight when it was officially confirmed that it is "Laika," which in Russian, means "The Barker."

"Laika" is a ginger-colored, sturdy, deep-chested Arctic sled dog. She weighs about 40 pounds, has thick fur, a curled tail and pointed nose and ears.

Other guesses circulating here earlier identified the space traveller as a male named "Limonechik" or still another female named "Danka."

At the same time, however, Pravda hinted at the possibility that space-travelling dogs are already on their way out, and that future Sputnik occupants might include monkeys.

Monkeys?

The Communist Party newspaper said that monkeys would furnish data more applicable to human travellers through space.

In a lengthy article describing the biological and human physiological problems encountered in sending animals and human beings into space, the writers, P. Gorlov and V. Yakovlev, said that dogs were not most suitable for the investigations of the special problems involved.

They said it would be better to use monkeys, rodents, mollusks and insects, particularly the last because they reproduce so quickly.

Analysis

To accommodate the dog in Sputnik II, the article said, a lightweight system to regenerate oxygen had to be devised, with a container to provide a regular oxygen supply.

It was also necessary to work out a method for supplying the dog with water or other liquid nourishment, since in the absence of gravity the liquid would spread all over the cabin.

They said that earlier experiments had shown that dogs could be safely returned to earth from a height of 200 kilometres.

The dogs were ejected from rockets in hermetically sealed containers which were then parachuted to earth. In some experiments, they said, the dogs were ejected at a height of 75 or 85 kilometres and floated to earth by parachute in 55 to 65 minutes.

Others were ejected at heights of 39 to 46 kilometres and their chutes automatically opened at four kilometres.—United Press.

Washington Reaction:
Senator Calls For
"Bold New Thinking"

Washington, Nov. 4. Senate Democratic leader Lyndon B. Johnson called today for "bold new thinking" in U.S. defence and foreign policy.

Johnson said the launching of Sputnik demonstrates the need for "mobilising and developing our resources as rapidly as possible."

Johnson, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Subcommittee on Preparedness, came here to confer with Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy and two other senior Senators on the U.S. programme of missile development in the light of the Russian achievement in launching two earth satellites.

The White House said, meanwhile, that President Eisenhower and his advisers are analysing the new satellite launching "very carefully," both as to what it means in terms of rocketry and, also, as to its scientific significance.

Congressional and scientific leaders voiced new fears that Russia, already first into space with a satellite and an animal, may be piling up an unbeatable lead in war missiles.

Two congressional inquiries into the Administration's handling of the crucial rocket-missile race with Russia opened today.

The White House, which yesterday said Russia's launch of Sputnik II came as "no surprise" to President Eisenhower, added this comment today: "The executive branch is analysing this very carefully, both as to what it means in terms of rocketry and, also, as to its scientific significance."

Johnson said a special session also should be called "to relax the ridiculous and outmoded security regulations which have the effect of preventing some of the best minds of science from working in the government programmes."

Responsibility

He said the proposed Cabinet member should have overall responsibility for scientific and technical research, including the development of satellites and missiles.

"We are away behind now and there is no good reason for the President to wait until the regular convening of Congress to try to get out United States programme off dead centre," Kefauver said.

Defence Secretary Neil H. McElroy, who already has ordered restoration of funds cut from the missile and research programme, said there will be no new speedup.—United Press.

The slender blonde fell asleep almost immediately. Baron instructed her that she would have only three persons he delegated to talk to her. Beggs will tell her when to get up, walk to a table, and eat the high-calorie meals which will be provided, he said.

Baron said he was "very optimistic" about curing the rash. The condition, described by Dr. George Saxe as Allergic Dermatitis, disappeared almost entirely under earlier hypnosis treatment, Baron said.—United Press.

Pills: Danger

Of Possible

Degeneration

Los Angeles, Nov. 4. The over-use of tranquillising pills can lead to the degeneration of Americans into a "flaccid race," says Dr. Henry H. Dixon of the University of Oregon.

Dr. Dixon, while at the California Academy of General Practice here, said yesterday that addition to tranquillising pills is, in many ways, worse than addiction to alcohol.

The doctor said that "one of the most haunting ailments of the United States is the anxiety state."

"Increasingly in this country people are inclined to reach for a tranquillising pill rather than try to handle the situation that confronts them," he said.

"The cultural possibilities are frightening. If we go too long in a state of tranquillity, we then can't pick up the trial and error process of learning."

Dr. Dixon added that "we then face the prospect of developing a flaccid race of people which might not be too good for our future."—United Press.

ELEPHANT v. HIPPOPOTAMUS IN FIERCE FIGHT

Lusaka, Nov. 4. An elephant and a hippopotamus killed each other in a fierce fight at Shashani in Northern Rhodesia.

The elephant had come down to the hippopotamus to drink when he was attacked by the hippopotamus.

A fierce fight to the death started on the river bank, the elephant dying from bites in its trunk and the hippopotamus from severe wounds.

Local villagers fished for days on the meat from the two beasts.

Earlier in the Shashani area, a lion was killed by a crocodile, the lion then being carried away by the crocodile and eaten.

Moscow Gets Set
To Celebrate
The Big Day

Moscow, Nov. 4. The leaders of the world's two greatest Communist powers, Russia and China, met today amid final preparations for celebrations here of the 40th anniversary of the October Revolution.

Official reports on the meeting between Nikita Khrushchev and Mao Tse-tung said only that it "took place in a cordial and friendly atmosphere."

Sources said they discussed Marshal Zhukov's expulsion from the Presidium and Central Committee, and the Sputnik II. The Russian Party boss also hinted at further surprises for the West, the sources said.

CORDIAL

Khrushchev also received Vietnam President Ho Chi Minh. "The conversation was of a cordial and friendly nature," Tass reported.

Mao and his delegation went on to make a courtesy call on President Klement Voroshilov while Premier Nikolai Bulganin hosted Ho later.

During the flurry of meetings it was announced that Zhukov's successor, Marshal Rodion Malinovsky, would review the giant military parade scheduled for Red Square on November 7.

The parade is timed to start at 1000 hours local time (0700 GMT) and will last some 50 minutes. Then the civilian marchers will take over.

Malinovsky will make the customary Defence Ministry speech which in 1955 and 1956 was Zhukov's task.

Marshal K. S. Moskalenko, Commander of the Moscow City Garrison and the Moscow Military District, will lead the parade.

PICTURES

Workers, meanwhile, started putting up huge pictures of the Communist Party Presidium on Moscow's public buildings. This operation was delayed several days pending an announcement on Zhukov's expulsion.

Sixteen portraits—14 Presidium members, Lenin and Marx—were affixed to the facade of the Maly Theatre. The Lenin Library and the Hotel Moskva were similarly decorated.

References to the triumphs of the Party in peaceful fields are expected to dominate this year's speeches. Soviet missile, engineering and aviation achievements will be lauded. Forecasts of even greater things are expected.—United Press.

ALGERIAN
TERROR IN FRANCE

Paris, Nov. 4. Several North Africans were killed in Algerian terrorist attacks in France over the week-end, the police announced today.

In Valenciennes, three cafeterias formerly frequented by members of the outlawed National Liberation Front were attacked last night by Algerians who were believed to be members of the civil Algerian National Movement.

In these attacks, three Moslems were killed and three others wounded.

In Lille last night, five unidentified assailants burst into a cafeteria and wounded seven Algerians who were playing dominoes.

In Lyons this morning, an Algerian was shot dead in a public toilet.

Outside Orleansville, midway between Algiers and Oran, saboteurs lowered rails just before 0500 GMT on Saturday. Minutes later, a locomotive and 13 freight cars plunged off the tracks at that point. One French soldier hiding the train was seriously hurt.—United Press and France-Press.

Salisbury, Nov. 4. Money does not grow on trees, a Salisbury magistrate told an African, Taswubwa, and sent him to prison for nine months for forgery.

The African said he lost his Post Office savings book and when he found it five months later, he found it was empty. He was fined £100 and £100 was paid for the book and the money was returned to him.

He was fined again for altering a £100 note to a £50 note, and £100 was paid for the note and the money was returned to him.

W. Germany's Relations
With Israel

Bonn, Germany, Nov. 4.

West German Foreign Minister Heinrich von Brentano said today that diplomatic relations with Israel would not be wise at this time in view of the tense situation in the Middle East.

Brentano told a Foreign Press Association meeting that deciding now to take up the relations would be of no benefit and could be damaging.

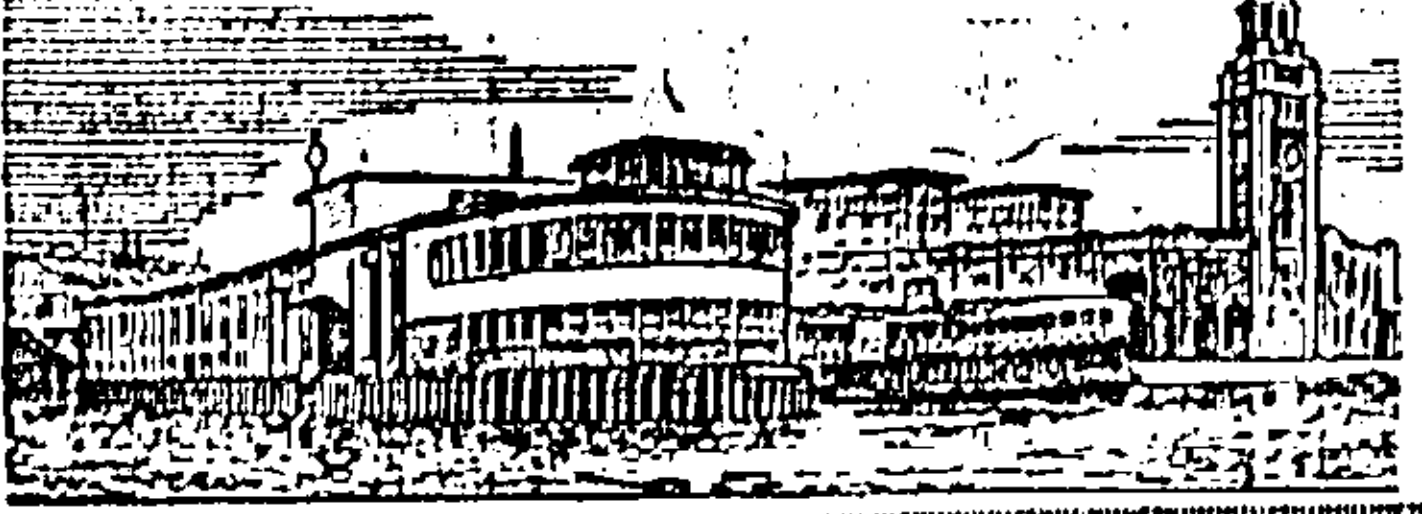

He said there already are good de facto relations between the two countries and that making them official might only increase the Middle East tension.

West Germany's relations with the Arab lands, he added, were "very good."

Brentano said that the government's decision to break off diplomatic relations with Yugoslavia after its secession from East Germany was based on an impartial assessment of the situation.—United Press.

JIM LANDS IN THE WRONG BEDROOM

—and gets his face slapped

IN times of stress, Jim Dixon made faces. There was his stab-in-the-back face, inspired by departmental treachery. There was his Edith Sitwell face, designed to show intellectual disdain. There was his Eskimo face, and his Martian Invader face—of which he was particularly proud.

But madrigals deserved something special. With his back to the company, Dixon conducted a small experiment. He rolled his eyes, distended his nostrils, and bared his teeth. With a little work, it might turn into something really good. But what should he call it? He ran through a few possibilities, and then grunted contentedly. The Mad Pansy face. He could hardly wait to show Atkinson.

Unobtrusively, he began to sidle to the door, when a voice called him back. "Mr Dixon," said Mrs. Welch, "would you be so kind, my son would like some coffee." Dixon smiled hypocritically, and bobbed his head. So that was who the bearded man was; Bertrand Welch, the pride and joy of his parents, and a pedigree phoney from head to toe. He poured coffee into an earthenware mug—Mr's Welch was a staunch supporter of arts and crafts—and then looked up sharply. Watching him was the girl who had accompanied Bertrand.

Her hair was glossy, her face smooth, and her figure was full. Dixon goggled in admiration. How on earth could someone like Bertrand get a girl like that?

Nervously, she turned away, and Dixon slopped milk into the coffee. Everything depended on luck, he thought, and luck was precisely what he lacked.

"Bertrand's latest, I suppose," said a voice at his elbow. "I wonder where he picks up these little numbers."

Dixon suppressed a sigh. All day he had avoided Margaret Peel, but now she had him cornered. Atkinson was right; Margaret was a menace. Not that she was unattractive. Her legs were good; her thin face had a kind of hysterical vivacity. But she troubled Dixon like a bad conscience.

Weeks ago, she had confessed to him that she had been liked, and clumsily, Dixon had offered sympathy. Margaret had clamped on to him like a zheep tick. She was intelligent. She was talkative. And she was critical. Privately, Dixon classified her as "dandy-bright." Margaret watched Bertrand's girl disappear. "She's rather pretty—in a way," she remarked. Dixon said nothing, waiting for the inevitable qualification. It came—right on schedule. "A pity she looks so awkward," said Margaret. Dixon shrugged his shoulders and fled. Bertrand's coffee was an excellent excuse.

Bertrand was holding court. His voice was a loud, arrogant bray, and his manner was that of a genius in a company of cretins. Dixon hated him on sight.

PHILIP OAKES

continues the story of the film adapted from the novel by KINGSLEY AMIS

"My work," said Bertrand, "advances slowly. I often wish I'd chosen a less exhausting profession like prize-fighting, or whatever other people do."

Dixon felt his luckless rise. "What is your work?" he asked. "You're a clerk," said Bertrand, chuckling indulgently. "I suppose you academic fellows would despise it. I'm a novelist."

"Nothing wrong with a good novel," said Dixon, "but you're pushing forward. You'll like Bertrand's," she said. "It's terribly interesting—and significant. About a man who has this awful problem of whether he murdered someone or killed himself. It all happens in his subconscious, you see, and he has to work it out."

Dixon restrained the impulse to hoot with laughter. "I can't wait to see it," he said gravely. "When will it be published?"

thinking of something else," he began feebly. "Another blunder, he told himself."

Unexpectedly, he was saved by Mrs. Welch. "The telephone is ringing in the dining-room," Mr Dixon, she said. "Will you answer it?"

Dixon obeyed gratefully. The atmosphere around Bertrand Welch was growing Arctic.

"The second half of the musical evening had begun when Dixon returned. 'It was Sir Hector Gore-Urquhart's secretary,' he hissed. 'Sir Hector can't come this evening.'"

Professor Welch laid down his recorder. "Of course he's coming. What on earth are you talking about?" he grumbled.

"Really, Mr Dixon," she snapped. "You should have asked me to come to a phone."

Dixon retreated, a face as angry as a red hot iron. He had just been told that Sir Hector Gore-Urquhart—can't come."

Bertrand jutted out his beard. "Why?"

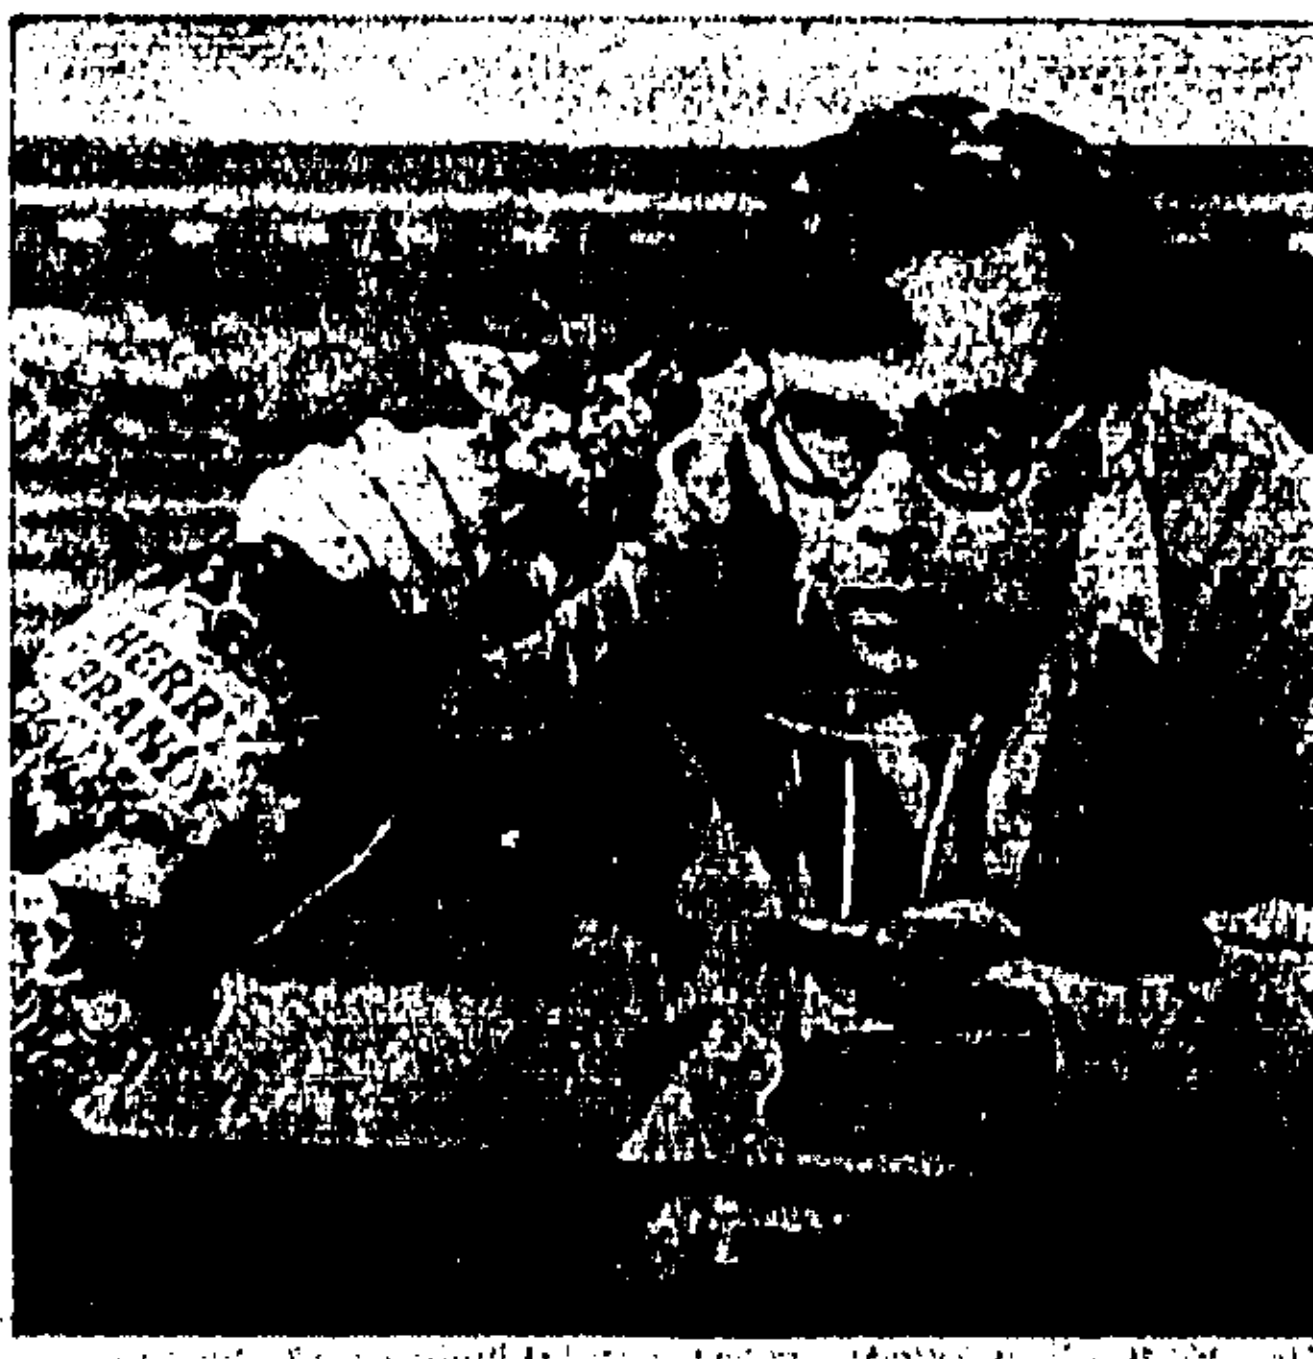

"I don't know why," Dixon hissed. "What's all the fuss about, anyway? He's only coming down now to get himself made into a Chancellor. Probably some crafty old cod who thinks there's something in it for himself."

Instantly, he knew that he had said the wrong thing. Bertrand took the arm of the dark-haired girl. "This," he said, "is Miss Christine Callaghan. Sir Hector is her uncle."

"I'm very sorry," began Dixon, but Bertrand cut him short.

"Furthermore," he said, "Sir Hector is considering my book for publication."

Dixon allowed himself a small, devious grin. "Well," he said, "that shouldn't take him long."

In the dining-room he discovered a bottle of cherry brandy.

ANNIVERSARY STORY

Found After 3,000 Years

Treasure-tomb discovery thrilled the world

THIRTY-FIVE years ago this month, the world was thrilled by news of the outstanding archaeological discovery of the century—the finding of the burial place of the boy-king, Tutankhamen.

Howard Carter a 48-year-old Briton first uncovered the entrance to the 3,000-year-old tomb on November 5, 1922. A famous Egyptologist, he had been excavating in the Valley of the Tombs of Kings, near Luxor, Upper Egypt, for 20 years.

In 1908, when Lord Carnarvon, an amateur Egyptologist, obtained from the Egyptian government a concession to excavate, Carter was asked to superintend operations. The concession was renewed annually.

When the 1922 digging season began, Lord Carnarvon's health prevented his making the journey to Luxor. Carter arrived there alone on October 28 with an uncanny conviction that he could locate almost exactly the resting place of the one Pharaoh whose tomb might have been left comparatively undisturbed by the plunderers of old.

But even Carter was dazed by the rapidity with which he made the discovery. He started his native labourers digging at a site, partially cleared in previous excavations, near to the tomb of Ramesses VI. By November 3, a number of stone huts had been laid bare. These were removed, as were three feet of soil below them.

The following morning, Carter arrived at the site to find that work had stopped. From the silence of his workmen, he realised something out of the ordinary had happened. They had uncovered a step cut in the rock below the entrance to Ramesses' tomb.

Excavations were resumed feverishly and by the afternoon of November 5, it was possible to see the top of a stairway. It was undoubtedly the entrance to a tomb; but there remained the awful possibility that it might be only an unfinished one.

Spurred on, however, by the discovery of a passage 10 feet high and six feet wide, the workmen speeded up their digging. Towards sunset, the upper part of a sealed doorway was revealed.

The only decipherable marks on the uncovered part of the door were those of the well-known royal necropolis seal. Had Carter known that only a few inches lower down there was a clear impression of Tutankhamen's seal, he would have been saved weeks of uncertainty. But it was very dark and he decided to call it a day, leaving his most trustworthy men on guard.

By looking through a small peephole, he had confirmed that beyond the door was another passage. He was certain now that it led to the tomb of a person of high rank, if not of the king for whom he had searched so long.

Carter would like to have pushed on with the work the next day. But he felt it was only fair to wait for Lord Carnarvon to join him. To prevent any possibility of interference, the archaeologist had the excavation completely filled in.

Lord Carnarvon arrived at the site on November 23 and, by the afternoon of the following day, the steps to the now-famous door had been uncovered once more and Tutankhamen's seal found. But it became obvious to the experts that plunderers had entered the tomb about 10 to 15 years after the burial.

However, it was also clear from the re-sealing of the door that the tomb had not been completely looted. On November 23, the door was removed, disclosing a descending passage about seven feet high.

At last came Carter's great day, the 26th. Thirty feet along the passage, the searchers came upon a second sealed doorway. With trembling hands, Carter made a tiny breach in the corner of the door, and inserted into it his iron testing-rod. The rod slid through to its full length, showing that whatever lay in the darkness beyond, the chamber was not filled with stones as had been the passage they had just cleared.

Tests for foul gases were made with a candle. Then Carter pushed the candle through the break in the door and peered into the room beyond. When his eyes grew accustomed to the light, the details of the chamber slowly took shape. Everywhere was the glint of gold.

It seemed an eternity before Carter moved. Can you see anything? asked Lord Carnarvon. "Yes, of yes," came the strained reply, "... wonderful things."

The treasures found in that centuries-old Aladdin's cave were enough to fill a small museum. There were three large gilt couches, their sides carved in the form of monstrous animals, exquisitely inlaid caskets, alabaster vases, strange black shrines, beautifully carved chairs and beds, a golden inlaid throne and piles of ornaments glistening with gold.

Yet the room was only an antechamber. At the end of it were two life-size black statues of kings, facing each other like sentinels, gold-kilted, gold sandaled, armed with mace and staff, and with the protective sacred cobra on their foreheads. Between these figures was yet another sealed doorway.

Beyond, in all the magnificent panoply of death, lay Tutankhamen, the boy who had ascended to the Egyptian throne about 1350 B.C. at the age of 12 and died only six years later. Politically unimportant, this young king had now become the best-known of all the Pharaohs.

Due to disagreements with the Egyptian Government, the burial chamber was not unsealed until nearly three months later. Then, besides the discovery of the mummy in the innermost of four beautiful shrines, a great wealth of treasures was found in an adjacent stone chamber.

Three weeks after the opening of the burial chamber, Lord Carnarvon was himself dead. A mosquito-bite had led to blood poisoning.

Sensationalists seized the opportunity to recall the "Curse of the Pharaohs"—that vengeance would be inflicted on anyone who passed the portals of Tutankhamen's tomb.

Carter protested strongly against these stories and called them "ridiculous." Certainly, the "Curse of the Pharaohs" did not affect him. He lived another 17 years.

THE International body set up to control outer space (I.C.O.S.) is going to have a busy time when the earth satellites run into showers of meteors.

Astronomers, confused by explosions and extraordinary noises, will find it difficult to tell the interplanetary Respection Board how much of this strange spheric tumult is caused by weapons designed for peaceful purposes, how much by natural upheavals, and how much by straying rockets designed for military purposes. Simultaneously a row will break out in the Disunited Nations General Assembly over the miserably small areas of outer space allotted to small nations. To crown all, there will be incomprehensible messages from Satellite Inspectors conveyed on stationary mountains. Commented Mr. Dulles, "It will be difficult to remain neutral in outer space."

Among the new books

My Life So Far, by Serena Boodle (The Mistle Press, 48s. 6d.).

THE remarkable thing about this autobiography is that it reads like the mature work of a girl of at least 10. Yet Miss Boodle is only 14. It makes allowances for an ungrammatical and untidy style, bad spelling, faulty punctuation, silly ideas about everything, priggishness, smugness, and total lack of interest in the subject matter; this should be the book of 1957. There is nothing in it for anyone, which is a relief after so many books in which there is something for someone. What wins respect and admiration is not the content of the work but the tender age of the author. Nobody looking at the picture of her feeding a mouse in her study could recall the charm of an unspoiled nature. ## YOUR BIRTHDAY ... By STELLA

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 5

BORN today, you come under exceptionally good aspects, but the complexity of your nature makes you a rather difficult person to understand. Your temperament opens your life to fascinating moods of alternating optimism and pessimism. Clever, intellectual, and an idealist at heart who likes to see your dream become real, you still find it difficult to reconcile the fact that you have to put up to gain your objectives.

You like to envision a Utopia for everyone, and when a sufficiently pressed, you will campaign for the realization of these dreams. You have a high degree of determination, and even though your objective is not one popular with a great many, you will persevere.

You have a sharp tongue and sometimes a caustic wit. You are not impressed with those who talk about things, yet do nothing. You believe that actions speak far louder than words and you have little patience with one who postpones action on the ground that it needs more discussion.

You have an emotional nature when it comes to love and romance.

and might easily be one who falls in love at first sight. The trouble is, you also fall out of love quite easily. This may give you the reputation of being fickle. Actually, you are just shopping around for that one and only to place high on a pedestal. Once you have found the true object of your affection, there is no one more loyal or true.

You have a good head for business and probably will be able to make money in ventures where others might fail. You are generous with what you have and, consequently, will never be rich unless you learn to say "no" more often to requests for financial help.

Among those born on this date were: Joel McCrea, Roy Rogers and Perry Mason, actor, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, poet, Eugene V. Debs, reformer, Will Durant, author, Bend Sinister, economist, Nicholas Longworth, statesman, and Ernest Noble, stage actor.

To find what the stars have in store for you tomorrow, select your birthday star and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 22)—Be sure your attitude is right if you intend to get the best possible results. Deal with others wisely.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22)—Today is the time to think first and then set upon your nature course. Be patient. Avoid feeling out any thing new now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 20)—Protect your interests and see that your personal status are not invaded. Also gain a considerable profit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19)—Property matters which need settling should be attended at once. Avoid any possible health hazard.

PISCES (Feb. 20-Mar. 20)—Test everything for practicality this morning. Take nothing for granted and you will not err in judgment.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 20)—You will find that advertising really does pay. Promote some idea very much involving a property investment.

TAURUS (Apr. 21-May 21)—Be alert to false promises this morning. Don't bank on anything that cannot be thoroughly tested.

GEMINI (May 22-June 21)—The morning may start slowly, but the day will bring you success. Build your talents and produce results.

CANCER (June 22-July 23)—Test your plan of action thoroughly before you move in a straight line toward success. Don't deviate from an objective.

LEO (July 24-Aug. 23)—Take a positive attitude toward things and you will find that you are reaping a real success. Act decisively.

VIRGO (Aug. 24-Sept. 23)—Weigh your mind one of a situation this morning and then act accordingly. Reach one of your goals.

LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oct. 23)—Partnership deals belong in the foreground today, especially if they are concerned with business or money.

West chose to open the door of his partner's suit from long-deuce. A most unusual lead but deadly against the unlucky expert. East played the ace. He decided the lead had been a singleton. The unlucky expert won with the queen and could count only eight tricks. He tried to sneak through a heart by leading the deuce and the roof fell on him.

West hopped right up with the ace and led the king of spades. East overtook and the unlucky expert was down three.

If West had made his normal opening lead of the king of spades there would be no way to beat the hand.

I asked, "What happened after that?" He replied, "The opponents proceeded to bid and make two slams. I quit the game and went home to arrive just in time to watch my house burn to the ground."

PRESENTING THE DRESS THAT MAKES THE SACK LOOK OLD!

by JOY MATTHEWS

THE STEP ahead of the sack—the cocoon. The dress that every other smart woman in London and Paris is wearing. The dress that the other smart women are talking about. The most successful copy of a French model that an English dress house has made this year. Paris model Simone Aucourt—the model in the picture, the girl that all the Parisiennes want to look like—adores it.

"I think that it is the most exciting, feminine, sexy dress I have worn for ages," she told me. "But it is a dress that needs to look a little eccentric. It looks terrible if it is worn too long. It looks terrible with clumsy shoes, or those chi-chi fussy hats. I should wear it with very twentieth accessories—pointed strap shoes, wriggly gloves, a deep, deep cloche. And it would look ravissant with one of the new racoon or opossum hats."

Simone was adamant about what to wear underneath the dress. No fancy underclothes, waist huggers, long belts. Just an ordinary rounded bra and a straight silk waist petticoat. The dress is in a rich deep blue, red, emerald, black, and yellow.

For Men

IT'S a good idea to let off steam every time you feel the need. It might keep you from developing an ulcer.

Of course, exploding at the wrong moment to the wrong person might very well lead you to the unemployment line or the divorce court. But by wisely choosing the proper person to tell your troubles to, you generally can avert any serious consequences.

Emotional stress, such as resentment makes the juices secrete by your stomach stronger. This can, in turn, often lead to formation of ulcers. Therefore, a simple way to prevent this from happening is to get rid of any pent-up anger.

Suppose the boss is in a bad mood. Very well, you don't want to talk back to him, but you've got to sound off to somebody. Why not try your spouse?

Let her know what goes on in the office, especially when something goes wrong. Most wives would be willing to share their husbands' problems if they were only given the chance.

If this still doesn't ease your tension, you can take it out—secretly—on the boss himself.

Get a picture of him or even of the building where you work. Then go down to the basement or to your recreation room, hang the picture on the wall and hurl darts at it.

A couple of bullseyes and your anger probably will subside.

If this isn't practical, try whacking a golf ball or baseball, anything (but not your wife) that will help you "get it out of your system."

The perfect solution is to let go when the disturbing factor occurs.

Some of you more fortunate employees or employers can get away with it. But for the average man, the one who can't say much without danger of losing his job, the best plan is to take your problem home where you can give way in private.

GENIUS AT THE FISH COUNTER

THERE is one artistic genius in town who has gone too long unsung. He is the chap who decorates the fish counters at Harrods.

For several months his uninhibited use of crabs, eels, his utter abandon with skate and plaice alike, has had me blinking. Last week he surpassed himself.

His masterpiece was a veritable sunburst of whitening carrying boy leaves in their mouths—alternating with smoked fillets. Up they swept in a kind of crescendo dotted with crayfish, to where, suspended on wires, a great white turbot hovered—like Aphrodite above the waves.

Across its belly lay a garland of asparagus fern and lemon slices.

It was beautiful.

I've called in twice to congratulate him—but he's a bit on the shy side," said one of his mates.

They're all the same—these artists.

GLYNIS SHOWS THE DIFFERENCE

"NOT her sort of thing at all," said an unmistakable honey-and-gravel voice behind me. "She's a Pearl-and-Twin-Set type."

It was Glynis Johns, in Jaggers—shopping for the clothes she will wear in Another Time Another Place which she is making with Lana Turner.

What does a "pearl-and-twin-set type" wear?

Glynis, the authority, bought a trio of button-through dresses in fawn, oatmeal and grey. Now for the twist in the tail of the story.

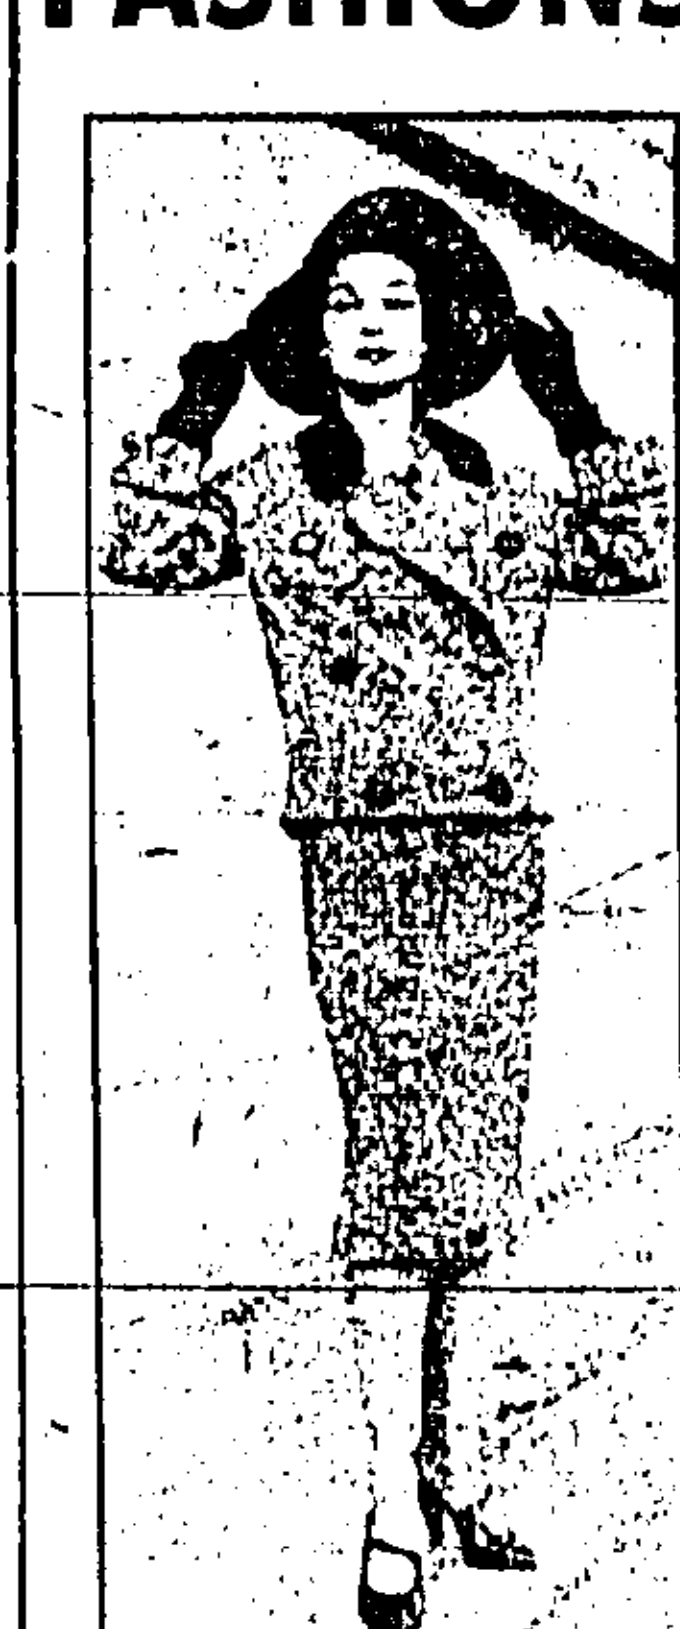

Guess what Glynis was wearing? A button-through dress and pearls.

The difference? Her dress was slinky tight in a gorgeous glowing scarlet. And the pearls? Ropes of "big ones." A big furry black hat, black patent belt and stiletto-tipped pumps completed a picture of a very slick chick indeed.

It's not what you wear—it's the WAY that you wear it.

Punch's Bird Poems

—Hanid Helps To Put Titles On Them—

By MAX TRELL

"A!" said Mr Punch "as he put down his pen. 'That's that!' he said. 'What's that?' asked Hanid. 'The Shadow Girl who was sitting on the other side of the room.'"

"I just finished writing them," said Mr Punch.

"Writing what?" asked Hanid. "Bird poems," said Mr Punch. Hanid looked surprised.

"I thought you were writing a letter," she said. "But I'm glad it's poems. I'd like to read them."

Not Quite Finished

"Well," said Mr Punch, "I'll be glad to let you read them, except for one thing. They're not really quite finished."

"But you said they were," said Hanid.

"I'd better explain," said Mr Punch. "The poems themselves are finished. But I haven't yet got around to putting the titles on them."

"Titles?" said Hanid. "You see," said Punch, "the poems are about different birds. But unless the titles are on each poem, no one will know which birds the poems are about."

Suddenly Mr Punch smiled. "Come to think of it," he said, "it might be a very good idea if I read you the poems and let you try to guess which birds I was writing about."

Like A Riddle

"That would be like guessing a riddle," said Hanid.

Mr Punch smiled again and nodded.

He read the first poem: "Little glimmer in your nest, Tell me how you got your chest?"

"So red?"

I stained it with a rose, He said.

"Right you are," said Mr Punch. "There's no bird like the Magpie for always chattering even when nothing is mattering. And incidentally, he went on, 'the Magpie is a great collector in addition to being a great chatter.'"

"What does he collect?" asked Hanid.

"Anything that's not too big for him to carry such as strings and buttons and beads and pieces of glass and shining stones and keys and pennies, to mention just a few."

Mr Punch read the third poem:

Rupert and Rusty—19

Rusty is now full of his new game. "Never mind about blackie," he says. "Let's pretend that the clues on that bit of paper lead us to the shore. There's a way down to the next bay. Let's go."

GLASGOW RANGERS READY TO SPEND FREELY TO BOLSTER THEIR DEFENCE

STANLEY MATTHEWS SAYS

Ban this barging the goalkeeper!

LET'S face it...this charging of goalkeepers has got to stop. It is not worth all the trouble it has caused over the past few years and I don't think the game would suffer in any way if it was scrubbed out tomorrow.

It upsets the Continentals every time and they retaliate with every rough trick they know.

It even upsets English crowds—especially when their own goalkeeper is bundled over—and I don't think the men between the posts care for it overmuch. I don't believe in pandering to the foreigners, but I think they have a case here.

We have become so welded to European Soccer that it's time to fall in line with the rest of the world.

Sitting Ducks

The argument has been raging in England ever since Manchester United goalkeeper Ray Wood was hurt at Wembley. It has been highlighted by the large number of injuries to goalkeepers in recent weeks.

Not all these injuries have been the result of charging, I know, but many people are now saying there should be more protection for goalkeepers. At present they are just sitting ducks for the robust incoming forward.

I know they are expected to take this as part of the game, but they are indeed handicapped when holding on to the ball.

Full Force

And, standing still, they have to take the full force of the charge.

Anyway, the old full-blooded charge has gone out of fashion—even in mid-field. You rarely see it and it is generally penalised because it is so difficult to differentiate between fair and foul.

Peter Doherty agrees with me about charging goalkeepers. He says it is almost impossible for a referee to tell whether or not a goalkeeper has his feet on the ground when charged.

Famous referee Arthur Ellis also thinks that it is most difficult to make a fair charge on a goalkeeper.

Ah, yes, I can hear you say that if the charge was made illegal, goalkeepers would quickly take advantage.

They would start tanselling opposing forwards by bouncing the ball around in the penalty area, in the manner of many Continental goalkeepers we have seen.

Time-Wasting

That may be so, but legislation could stop it. Arthur Ellis says that any time-wasting could be beaten by forcing goalkeepers to get rid of the ball quickly.

This could be done by a rule compelling them to kick the ball after taking four paces, or after bouncing the ball once or twice.

We may have to follow the Continent on this no charging of goalkeepers when they play their teams. So why not cut it out altogether?

Big Profits

Blackpools average home "gate" last season on their small Bloomfield Road ground was just over £21,000. But they made just over £21,000 profit, too. Poor home attendances because of cramped accommodation have been outweighed by the attraction of Stanley Matthews at away games. Blackpool and Stanley draw in the crowds on opponents' grounds.

Unhappy Wembley moment—with goalkeeper Ray Wood and Peter McParland injured after colliding.

THE JOCKEY WHO NEVER GAVE UP —GEORGE SLACK

by DICK FRANCIS

Aintree specialist George Slack, second twice on Tudor Line in the Grand National, has won his long and grim fight against disability. He is fit again and ready to take on the best.

It was nearly two years ago that George smashed his left shoulder when Scottish Sea fell in a schooling session. In all, he spent 16 weeks in three different hospitals—and at one time it was feared that his arm would have to be amputated. But he never gave up his ideas of a comeback.

Now 34, George Slack has a new job as farm manager in Lincolnshire—he got himself fit again by harvesting—and says he hopes to stay there even if he regains his place among the leading jockeys.

His weight is 10st., and every time he gallops a horse he feels his old confidence returning.

I predict that the jockey-who-never-gave-up will soon be riding winners again.

Short-Lived

Compared with a flat race jockey the prime of a steeplechase rider is short.

There is a continual eagerness among trainers to spot a promising beginner and annex him—his place in the stable—as an investment for the future.

Of the jockeys at present in their early to middle twenties only one has been for some years established among the leaders. This is farmer's son Michael Scudamore, who last season had the Cheltenham Gold Cup, the King George VI Chase, and the Welsh Grand National among his 58 successes, and finished second only to Fred Winter.

Third leading jockey was Billy Rees, who has risen to the top rapidly. He is the 23-year-old nephew of the famous F. B. (Dick) Rees.

Bob Tunwell, who "spotted" Billy, is now having a struggle to ward off the queue of trainers eager to employ him. He is also riding regularly for Frank Cundell, having taken my place on his horses.

Rees rode Cradwell to beat Scudamore, on Linwell, at Fontwell Park recently. I watched these two excellent jockeys ride side by side over the last fence with a thrusting force that impressed the many onlookers standing with me in the centre of the course.

Several other good young jockeys are on their way up. One is Stan Mellor, who is still only 20, but is in his fifth season of steeplechasing. He has prospects of a good winter on George Owen's horses—but failed his medical for the Services a fortnight ago because of an old back injury!

Graham Nicholls, attached to Peter Cazale's stable as alternative jockey to Arthur Freeman, lost his allowance only the other Monday when he rode his 15th winner.

He makes the most of all his chances in an unflustered and intelligent way.

Neglected

Michael Roberts, a rather shy jockey who is unduly neglected, is riding this season for Bobby Norris. He is well worth attention.

Brightest young hope in the North is Mike Bletcher, who rides for Stewart Wight. But Stan Hayhurst (Yorkley Bewick), Pat Hurley (Wright), and Noel Boston (Jack Ormon) will be his rivals in a few years' time for the Northern championship.

Two boys still riding with an allowance look "possible" for the top 10 in a few years' time. David Nicholson has the good luck to be the son of his father—Frenchie Nicholson, formerly an expert jockey, and now a trainer.

David, still in his teens and 6ft. tall, may find his size a nuisance. If he begins to get heavy, but at present he can do the astonishing skin-and-bone weight of 8st. 7lb.

Well Taught

Tony Dennis, 23-year-old jockey to Peter Rice-Stringer, has so far ridden only seven winners. He was well taught by George Verge, with whom he served his time, and joined his present stable last season. If my eyes do not mistake me, he is good.

Not only do all these young jockeys ride well, but they use their brains. And they have all had the priceless advantage of riding good horses. They'll win a lot of races.

Among them also is Jimmy Lindley, who has already made his mark on the flat. He rides exceedingly well over hurdles.

Italy's European Welter Champion Beaten On Points

Paris, Nov. 4.

Emilio Marconi, Italy's European Welterweight Boxing Champion, was beaten on points over 10 rounds here tonight by Scraphin Ferrer of France.

Marconi was a big disappointment to the crowd and Ferrer deserved the decision.

The Frenchman did nothing exceptional, but kept up a continuous attack throughout the ten rounds.

Marconi's best round was the ninth when he dropped Ferrer with a solid left-right combination to the jaw, but the Frenchman jumped up almost immediately.

In another ten-round bout, Cherif Hamlin, France's European featherweight title-holder, scored a narrow points victory over Annibale Omodet, of Italy.

Go South Of The Border For A Centre-Half

By JAMES CONNOLLY

London

Glasgow Rangers, desperate for a dominating centre-half in the George Young mould, come south of the border in their search. Manager Scot Symon is ready to bid for Danny Malloy, of Cardiff City.

Danny, who cost Cardiff £15,000 from Dundee two years ago, has been playing most of the season with a nagging foot injury. He saw a specialist recently and was told that a rest would soon clear the trouble. That is why he was replaced by Welsh international Ray Daniel in the Cardiff team against Lincoln City.

Danny would like to get back to Scotland. Although Cardiff would prefer a player exchange, they won't jib at a straight cash offer.

Rangers, shattered by that 7-1 League Cup grand slam from Celtic, are ready to spend freely to bolster their defence.

Positive Ideas

Bolton manager Bill Ridding has positive ideas on how the "ponching" of young amateur stars by rival League clubs could be stopped.

"Make them junior professionals from 15 to 17, with an agreement similar to senior professional and you will end all the trouble," he says. Now, any manager with a brilliant youngster—who can't become a professional until he is 17—can never be certain that the boy won't be tempted by other clubs.

Newcastle United will appoint a team manager probably early in the New Year, but it won't be without a board-room battle at St. James' Park.

Newcastle have had no manager since Doug Livingstone, now with Fulham, left them 18 months ago.

Alderman John McKean, who becomes Newcastle chairman, by rota, after tomorrow's annual meeting, is one of the directors who believe United should have a paid manager.

He isn't alone. The "we want a manager" brigade are in the majority.

General dissatisfaction at Newcastle's form and League position this season will probably sway the voting.

A Big Profit

Southend manager Eddie Perry has never regretted signing Errol Crossan from Gillingham during the close season.

The right winger who never hit top form with Kent club has been a smash-hit at Southend. Within a few weeks of the start of the season they could have sold Crossan, who cost less than £2,000, at a big profit.

Two other players who didn't cost Southend a penny are wanted by League clubs. Birmingham have a fancy for left winger Johnny McGulgan, who came on a free transfer from Aberdeen, while Newcastle have been watching John Anderson, the Scottish-born right back.

Mel Hopkins, Spurs' Welsh left back, plays the rest of the season with his right elbow bandaged.

Hopkins was injured at the end of last season. "The bandage is a protection against tearing the skin open again," says Hopkins.

Unwanted Man

Eddie Hapgood, 34 times skipper of England, can't get a job in Britain.

But if Hapgood is the unwanted man of soccer in this country, he is well remembered by the Continentals. Dutch club Naastrecht want an English coach—and became extremely interested in 47-year-old Hapgood when they found last week that he was still out of football.

Naastrecht know Hapgood's career—his 43 caps for England and his 10 years with Arsenal. All they want to know now is the salary he would require and if he would want a house.

More Japanese Winners In Future Golf Tournaments

New York, Nov. 4.

The victories of Japanese golfers Tanikichi Nakamura and Kachi Ono in the recent international golf tournament in Tokyo will give the game a big boost and produce more Japanese winners in the future, the US News and World Report magazine said in its current issue.

A caption noted in bold letters: "Japan a new threat to world—on golf links." The special story detailing the growth of the game in Japan noted:

"What the Japanese lack right now is depth in experts, both professionals and amateurs. Japan has perhaps half a dozen players of world calibre. The United States can raise several times that many without scrapping the bottom of the barrel."

But don't be surprised if, in a few years, you see Japanese players in the top brackets of many international matches. They won't be long off the tee, but they will be deadly with their irons and putters—and it's the short game that gets the ball in the hole.—United Press.

He added that he intends to try to keep the fight at close quarters to avoid Halimi's strong left uppercut and at the same time seek to bring his favourite blow, a left hook to the body, in play.—France-Press.

Thursday Island Awaits The Arrival Of The Japanese Shell Divers

Sydney (By Air Mail).
 Dilapidated Thursday Island is awaiting the coming of the Japanese with more enthusiasm than anyone would have thought possible 15 years ago.

The Federal Government announced last week that up to 200 Japanese shell divers will be admitted to the island under fairly strict arrangements.

This decision follows long negotiations by the Torres Strait Shell Divers' Association who see in the return of the Japanese the only hope of Thursday Island shell fishing again showing them a profit.

SLIDING DOWN

Thursday Island, by no means the romantic place which it may seem to city dwellers, has been rapidly sliding down the economic hill because the pearl shell in the shallow depths has been "mined" and Torres Strait Islanders refuse to go into deeper waters.

The island's biggest pearling "king", John Dunwoodie (54 years and 17 years in the industry), claims that there are millions of pounds worth of shell waiting to be picked up in the Straits but only the Japanese are capable of getting down to the depths to bring it to the surface.

The native divers hesitate before going deeper than 10 fathoms but the Japanese will dive 40 or more without complaint.

Police on the island, which is actually a part of Queensland, will be specially briefed to protect incidents between the Japanese and Australian fishermen and strict discipline will be maintained over the Japanese.

Terms of the entry of the Japs to Thursday Island is that one Torres Strait diver must be employed for every Japanese diver on the lugger and the Japanese must impart their specialised diving knowledge to native divers. First part of the contract can be kept easily enough but it is doubtful if the fuzzy wuzzies want to pick up hints of diving to 40 fathoms.

Most old residents of Thursday Island think the Japanese and the local inhabitants will settle down and live peacefully enough, together, although some admit that a whispering campaign is in progress to create trouble.

GAPING HOLES

Thursday Island, a dusty, dirty, unkempt place, drastically needs something to happen to restore it to the thriving township it was some 20 years ago.

Its footpaths, even in the centre of the town, are dusty there are gaping holes in the dirt main street and many of the buildings, including those owned by the Government, are white-ant-eaten, and the island is in the grip of the worst shortage known to white men.

This week 1,800 people of all colours on T.I. have been cut to 30,000 gallons a day all because nothing has been done to harbour water in newly constructed dams over the years.

Thursday Island's estimated pearl-shell harvest this year is about $220,000. It should be well over £1 million and with the return of the Japanese, pearl-shell is thinking of next year's harvest in terms of £1,500,000.

McGIRR DIES

A former Premier of NSW, Mr James McGirr, died in Sydney on Sunday night aged 97, and his death removed one of the big Labour figures of the last 20 years, the late James McGirr being No. 2 in the chain of Labour premiers.

He took over office as Premier from Sir William McKell after he was appointed Governor-General.

He had been a member of State Parliament for 20 years, five of them as Premier. He supported his friends and shocked his opponents a number of times during his political career, but never so much as when he introduced the 40-hour week legislation in 1937, thereby forcing the Legislature on all other States, and again when he accepted the chairmanship of the Maritime Services Board one hour after he resigned the premiership.

BOYS SACKED

Childhood memories of Billy Hunter, Jim Wharton and the Remove at Greyfriars, reviewed for thousands of people this week when the Head of Canterbury Boys High School sacked (provisionally) three members of "Fifth-Form", cancelled the end-of-term festivities, handed out caning to an unlikely few, all because of the use of water pistols.

The Head claimed he had warned about the use of water pistols and his warnings had been ignored.

In the great Billy Hunter tradition, there were protest marches, talk of the Head getting "too tough", and even suggestions of rebellion. Unhappily (and we don't recall this every happening at Greyfriars), the police were called to try and discover who whitewashed on the walls the words "E.R.S. The Cuckoo". E.R.S. being the initials of Mr Watson, the Headmaster.

U.S. CAPITAL

Unhappily in many ways, the Head kept his word and there were no end-of-term festivities, and the fifth year students went to their homes to do their fortnight's study before sitting for the Leaving Certificate examination with just a touch of bitterness in their hearts.

In an effort to spike the actions of Victoria which for the last five years or so has been scooping the cream of the overseas investment and getting for itself a great share of migrants and new industries, the NSW Government has decided to open an office in New York to attract American capital.

QANTAS HOUSE

The Premier, Mr Cahill, said the office would be used to interest American concerns in establishing industries in NSW, and to supply all necessary information to them.

Mr Cahill has not announced how much it is expected the New York office will cost or what the staff will be.

The Prime Minister, Mr Menzies, this week opened one of Australia's outstanding buildings—the new "Qantas House".

The building cost £1,500,000 is 15 storeys high and is built on what is to be an extension of Sydney's Elizabeth Street.

Unfortunately, a tumbledown old stone building owned by the Sydney Council still stands almost in the main doorway. This building is to be demolished to allow for an extension of Elizabeth Street but the Council has so far been unable to get the tenants out.

Qantas is an instrument of the Commonwealth Government and operates as a public company. It is the world's sixth largest airline on the basis of its uncompleted route mileage of 60,000 miles and it will soon become the first airline to establish a direct round-the-world service.

The building is the first in Australia to have continuous direct telegraphic contact with London, Singapore, San Francisco, and Melbourne and through relays with Hongkong, Karachi, Calcutta and most points in Europe.

SHAKE-UP

The merger between Ansett-ANA is settling down but there has been a considerable shake-up in the staff. Eighty airport workers at Melbourne have been dismissed.

Managing Director, Mr R. M. Ansett said the men concerned were mostly unskilled or semi-skilled workers, but there would be no cutting down on maintenance of aircraft.

On the first day of its co-ordinated timetables last week the Ansett-ANA aircraft carried 4,000 passengers—the greatest number of travellers by one airline in one day in Australian history.

The revenue from nearly 100 flights was £50,000 and 83 per cent of the seats available on the amalgamated services were taken. On that day there were 10 services each way between Melbourne and Sydney with 1,800 moving in or out of Sydney.

Each day now Ansett-ANA has more than 50 aircraft landing at Sydney as well as the overseas airlines which it services.

DEADLY MANTIS

Anthony Fuller Review

If you like science fiction, not on flies, but on human beings. The film has it as the largest creature that has ever lived, and it has been asleep for eons under the polar icecap until an earthquake shakes it awake. The rest you can imagine; it comes to more civilised regions in search of prey. You see it in Washington and New York. I think the technicians should always get a mention in these kind of films, for they made the whacking great beetle.

The Deadly Mantis corners Alia Talton, in a scene from "The Deadly Mantis". The relative sizes are altered so as to get the Mantis in the picture.

science fiction: It is plausible, and also possible.

Craig Stevens, Alia Talton, and William Hopper, are in the starring roles, and they maintain the good performances in this film, they have given in its predecessors.

This means that "Deadly Mantis" although highly imaginative, is basically sound in its scientific premise, and then proceeds to tell a story that is rather terrifying. As the name will tell you, this thing which kills in the picture is a giant Mantis, Religiosa, which lifts its leafy identically, it could use the Queen Mary as a soup spoon, or the Empire State Building as a walking stick. We certainly get bigger and better monsters all the time. Stevens and Hopper team up well as a defence officer and scientist, respectively.

Alia Talton is the lady journalist and feminine interest in this film. If you like science fiction, you will like this. I said at the beginning, Universal-International do this kind of thing well. It is competent, has polish, and is pleasant, as William Alland, who by the way, is a very fine science fiction writer.

Today Is Guy Fawkes' Day BUT WHO WAS HE?

Our Writer Jack Edwards Says

Within a few hours of your reading this, small boys in England will be trundling through the streets with a bundle of old rags, roughly assembled to resemble a man. They will meet you with the cry: "Please remember the Guy."

You will then be expected to dip in your pocket and pull out no less than sixpence, these days, I suppose.

Your sixpence will go into a pool to buy fireworks. Later the Guy will be burnt on a bonfire while crackers, catflap wheels, and rockets blaze around.

Yorkshireman

Scarcely anyone knows who Guy Fawkes was certainly the small boys couldn't care less. All they know is, he is the man after whom the day is named and greatly to be esteemed on that account.

Some older boys will know he was caught trying to blow up Parliament; but most Englishmen think he was a foreigner of sorts, who went to England bent on foul intrigue.

Guy Fawkes was a Yorkshireman, and you can't be more English than that. His father was Edward Fawkes, a Protestant and Advocate of the Protestant Reformation.

become a member of the mission to Madrid to urge Philip III to invade England.

What is behind the story? It begins in the last days of Elizabeth. Certain of the Catholic subjects were so sick and tired of her persecution that they certainly engaged in treasonable practices, when she died, James I came to the throne, and as his mother had received such harsh treatment at the hands of Cecil, it was thought there might now be a change of policy.

For a time there was. Cecil waited, highly dissatisfied, and when he thought James had gone far enough, he frightened him into restoring all the old measures of fines that were designed to ruin the Catholic families.

Somewhere about April 1604, a few Catholics held a secret meeting in London. It was a Mr Percy, a relation of the Duke of Northumberland, who really set the ball rolling with these words: "Well gentlemen, shall we always talk and never do anything?"

One Fell Blow

Then and there was hatched the maddest-batter plot in English history. In one fell blow, the King, Parliament, and all its members were to be blown sky high, and a republic set up, which would permit Catholics the same rights as their New England.

That in 1605, he was chosen to

BOAT BUILDING WITH GLASS FIBRE

The use of glass fibre construction will again be demonstrated at London's boat show early next year. Among the exhibits will be a 28 ft. 8 in. cabin cruiser now nearing completion at the Hampton on Thames yard of John I. Thornycroft and Co. Ltd.

This is the largest glass fibre hull being made at the yard and is designed for cruising for four people. It can also make short coastal trips.

The firm have allowed for modifications such as twin engines, rearrangement of the accommodation to provide a forepeak cabin with twin berths or adding a steering shelter. A speed of 24 statute mph (19 kph) can be expected with the 30 hp diesel engine and fuel tank capacity is sufficient for 170 miles (270 kilometres).

The cruiser is in the firm's Danella Class. After the boat show the boat is being sent to Brussels for the International Exhibition next year. Using the same hull design, the builders are also producing in the Polywag class a general service launch capable of a speed of 14 statute mph (12 kph). The 35 gallon fuel capacity gives a range of 100 miles (160 kph).

HEAVY DUTY

The launch has been designed for heavy duty work as well as being suitable as a passenger launch or equipment transporter.

The firm have been carrying out a great deal of research into the use of glass fibre and in the hull construction use eight layers of 1½ ounce mat. Said an official of the firm: "We don't believe in skimping to effect economy."

Though the firm have designed a number of fittings for their boats made from glass fibre they still make use of wood. Patrol craft being made for the Cypriot Police and the boats for the Venezuelan destroyers being made by Vickers Armstrong are all in conventional materials.

A NEW TYPE DIESEL CRUISER

A revolutionary 35 ft. speed cruiser produced by a Teignmouth, Devon, firm is claimed to be the only one of its kind produced in Britain. It is given a speed of 24 mph, with the low fuel consumption of diesel engines.

Interest in this new cruiser is being shown in many parts of the world, and in the few weeks since the prototype was placed in service, and details of the new boat sent to America, an American firm have made inquiries for the supply of 50 over a 15-month period.

The new diesel cruiser, a 35 ft. hard chine construction boat, is the result of intensive research. A large amount of pre-fabrication is employed in its construction.

HEAVY SEAS

Even in heavy seas the construction is such that the boat is dry, the laminated frames with integral deck beams enable the boatbuilders to provide great strength with low weight.

The total weight is only 3,600 tons compared with the more usual six tons for similar boats of this type.

The two 100 h.p. Perkins diesel engines are housed in a sound-proofed compartment. The boat has a sleeping capacity of five or six persons, and the luxury standard fittings include a cocktail cabinet, refrigerator, wardrobes and cupboards, and an automatic shower.

"PALLET-LOADING" ON NEW SHIP

Gothenburg. The motorship Otella, the first of four 1,000-deadweight-ton vessels being built by the Swedish Solvabergsvarvet yard for Swedish Lloyd, was launched recently.

These ships have been designed to use the "pallet-loading" system in order to ensure quick unloading at port. Equipment on board will include electric fork-lift trucks.

Under the "pallet" system cargo is made up into units of one or two tons before loading, and these units remain intact during the voyage. Swedish Lloyd has been using the system for some time on its services from Newcastle, Leith and Liverpool.

SISTER SHIP FOR "UNITED STATES"?

New York. The plan for United States Lines to build a new sister ship for the liner United States may set a dangerous precedent if the proposed conditions on which the Government will help subsidise the project are adopted.

The terms of Bill, now under consideration provide for the Government to build the vessel, and sell it to the shipping company for $44 million, United States Lines will be obliged to make a down payment of only 25 per cent, or about $11 million, to obtain delivery of the liner.

The liner will cost probably between $125 million and $130 million to build. This will obligate Congress to increase the necessary appropriations by about $35 million beyond the original estimate.

It is also pointed out that interest on the balance of the cost to the company is tentatively fixed at 3½ per cent. Other shipowners have had to pay more than this recently on private mortgages.

SALE

The proposed sale of the vessel at a fixed price breaks with precedent. The usual method of fixing a subsidy is on the basis of the difference between the cost of building in a United States and a foreign yard.

These and other deviations from the Merchant Marine Act could result in contentions of equally justifiable special circumstances in future. For example, a new line for American coastwise service is now also under consideration for special treatment at this time.

US PORT OFFICIALS ON A 'CRUSADE'

New York. Port officials attending the American Association of Port Authorities annual convention here recently were urged to crusade for a 10-year extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreement Act.

The Foreign Commerce Committee of the association, in a 14-page report, also stressed the importance of actively working for the enactment of the Organisation for Trade Co-operation legislation. Failure to pass such key legislation, the committee warned, will eventually bring disaster to the country's economy with the rest of the world.

IMPORTANT GOALS

On the other hand, if the 86th Congress (2nd Session) renews for 10 years the Trade Agreements Act of 1930, due to expire on June 30 next, it will accomplish two important goals:

● It will lay the foundation for increased world commerce.

● It will sponsor closer, more business-like relations with trading nations of the free world.

A spot check among port executives, who came to New York from the leading port areas of North and South America, revealed widespread agreement with the principles contained in the committee report and resultant resolution.

A "CLUB" OF MARITIME NATIONS

London. The Council of the British Chamber of Shipping has discussed Lord Simon's suggestion that traditional and other genuine maritime nations should form a "club" to deal with the threat to their prosperity of tax-free "flag of convenience" fleets.

Lord Simon commented after the meeting: "It was not to be expected that there could be any decision on what is recognised as a new idea."

"There was a preliminary exchange of views and the Council agreed that the proposal should be examined so that all the considerations involved can be carefully weighed."

Stressing that the plan was purely a personal view, he agreed that there were a number of considerations involved, and that, to be successful, there must be virtually unanimous agreement by the main shipbuilding and ship-owning countries, including Japan and Germany.

GIRL'S RACE AGAINST CLOCK

Must Be In US In A Day

By A CHINA MAIL REPORTER

A young Chinese girl who set out from Kai Tak at noon today on a BOAC Britannia for Tokyo is relying on this jet age, modern aircraft and the International Dateline to enable her to set foot in the United States before she is over 21.

Mother Of MiG Hero In States

Washington, Nov. 4. Mrs. Saling Kim Ko of Korea, the first Far Eastern refugee from Communism to be admitted to the United States under the amended Immigration Act, arrived by air today and was welcomed by State Department officials.

Mrs. Saling is the mother of Kenneth Rowe, Korean pilot who fled Communist North Korea in a jet fighter in 1955 and is now in the U.S. as a student at the University of Delaware. He received a $100,000 reward from the U.S. Air Force for bringing in the enemy jet.

Mrs. Saling fled the North in 1951 for South Korea where she since has been living. She will join her son in Delaware. —United Press.

This is her problem: The girl, Miss Young Tam-ling, has to reach the United States between November 5-6, otherwise she will be too old to qualify to enter America as a "minor."

She was unable to get away until this morning. BOAC is flying her to Tokyo and if the aircraft is delayed by headwinds, her connecting plane from the Northwest Airlines out of Tokyo at 6:40 pm (Tokyo time) will be held up if necessary. However, the Britannia crew will make every effort to get Miss Young into Tokyo in good time to carry out the second stage of her "beat-the-clock" air trip.

Gained Day

If the Northwest plane lands in the United States on time, Miss Young will, in fact, be there at 8:30 pm today on Pacific Standard Time reckoning.

Then, not only will she have beaten the clock, but the International Dateline will have gained her a day and she will have qualified to enter the United States under 21 years of age.

FOLIES STAR IN COLONY

By JOHN LUFF

I have just been talking to Miss Afrocaribe, the Spanish Star of the Folies Bergere, who begins an engagement at Maxims tonight.

She is full of personality.

She was born at Santa Fe in the Argentine, went to school there, but finished her education in France.

I asked her how she became interested in dancing. She said she had been at school when she had a ballet class and her love of dancing grew out of that.

Her first engagement was at the Casino, Buenos Aires, and since then she has danced and sung her way all around the world.

I asked, "Where did you get the Afrocaribe?"

Her reply was most unexpected. "Because I had assumed that it had something to do with her appearances in North Africa," she said. "When I was a little girl I was always dancing and jumping about the house. I could not be still for a minute. My mother said I was just like an African, so 'Afrocaribe'."

"But what about the 'caribe' part?" I asked.

Joined Together

"Oh that, well, I took it from the Caribbean Sea. And joined together they make Afrocaribe."

Miss Afrocaribe can sing in Spanish, Italian, and French. She told me she would be singing in these languages in her performances at Maxims. She also dances, and her teacher was the famous dancing teacher, Otto Weber of Buenos Aires.

I asked if she had performed before many famous people. She told me she had danced before the late President of Brazil, Getulio Vargas, Aly Khan, and ex-King Farouk.

I wondered if in so far as the found time for a life of interests. I was delighted to find that writing was her hobby. Miss Afrocaribe keeps a diary, a secret one, in which she records all the events that coincide with her appearances in various towns of the world. Her object is to write a book (when she has time) based upon her experiences.

She can also cook Italian style, she told me, and enjoys cooking very much. She did not say, "If I knew you were coming I'd have baked a cake."

Lancashire Doubtful About HK Limiting Cotton Exports

London, Nov. 5.

The Financial Times today stated that the report that Hongkong might now agree to some sort of voluntary limitation of textile exports to Britain is being treated with reserve in Lancashire.

Congressman On Tour Of Asia

An Indian-born American Congressman, Mr. Dalip Singh Saund, arrived here this morning on a US military plane in the course of a world trip with a two-fold purpose.

His tour is an official mission and he is to investigate the needs of the countries now under development and to try to remove misunderstanding among the Asian peoples about the United States.

Mr. Saund was elected to the Congress in 1950 by the 20th District of California. The Congressman was born in Punjab and he went to the United States 37 years ago when he was 21. He went there to learn about fruit canning. However, he studied mathematics, gaining the PhD in 1924.

At that time, he said, there was a real bad prejudice concerning racial segregation in California.

REFUSED ENTRY TO THEATRE

An 18-year-old youth, who assaulted his friend because he was refused entry to a theatre without paying, was sentenced to eight weeks' imprisonment by Miss B. K. Searle at Central this morning.

Defendant, Ho Kwok-ming, who pleaded guilty, faced the Court on a charge of assault, occasioning bodily harm.

The prosecution stated that at about 12.50 pm on September 24, the complainant, So Kui, who was defendant's friend, was on gate duty at the Ray Theatre, Sai Yuen Poon, when defendant tried to enter without a ticket.

Defendant was stopped and he left the theatre in an angry mood.

LIBEL ACTION POSTER INCORRECT

Our attention has been drawn to the fact that the poster for The China Mail of yesterday's date was incorrectly worded in stating that the libel action referred to was against and not by the American actress Jacqueline Cochran Odium.

On the question of US aid to Formosa, he said it was under study every year. He added that there was always room for improvement and, depending on the necessity, there was always the possibility of increasing aid when needed.

Speaking on racial segregation in America, Mr. Saund pointed out that there was none in 35 of the 48 States and it was only confined to the 13 states of the deep South. This showed, he added, that sentiment in the US was against segregation.

Tenancy Tribunal Application Refused

Loss of export trade to the Colony, hardship to workers in a knitting factory and lack of funds for monetary compensation were among the reasons given by Tenancy Tribunal for refusing an exemption application today.

Mr. J. H. G. Way, President, with Mr. R. Relferisen and Mr. Fong Shui-lun decided not to recommend a scheme whereby Nos 157/157, Fook Wa Street would be replaced by a modern six-story structure costing $130,000, in accordance with plans drawn up by Mr. Chan Wing-on.

Mr. R. C. Woo of Messrs. P.C. Woo and Co. appeared for the applicant, Mr. Leung Lai-mui, owner of the premises which are largely occupied by a knitting factory.

Compensation of $140,000 was requested for dismantling and removal expenses by the factory proprietor who was represented by Mr. F. H. B. Wong of Messrs. C. Y. Kwan and Co.

Where's That Leopard?

The "mystery" leopard which was first reported in Shatha District about a fortnight ago, is believed to be roaming about in the hills in Salikung.

Farmers in a village some distance north-east of Salikung reported to the Police that a calf had been killed three days ago by an animal which was "larger than the largest Alsatian dog."

Since the report, the Police have been sending out patrols and hunting parties in the hope of finding the animal and destroying it.

CANADIAN TRADE MISSION TO CHINA

The Canadian Government Trade Commissioner in Hongkong, Mr. C. M. Forsyth-Smith, left for China today on a three-week exploratory visit to promote trade between Canada and China.

The Commissioner was accompanied by his assistant, Mr. Thomas Pope. They left by train for Canton from where they will fly to Peking.

They will also visit Tientsin and Shanghai later.

Mr. Forsyth-Smith said last week that they would have discussions with most of the Chinese trade corporations.

He said the mission was not only a Government development level. It was a fact-finding tour for the benefit of private businessmen in Canada.

Four Years For Heroin Possession

Judge James Wicks at the Victoria District Court this morning sentenced Ma Hon-chiu, alias Lam Kwong, alias Ma Choi, 30, unemployed, to four years' hard labour for possession of 19.6 ounces of heroin.

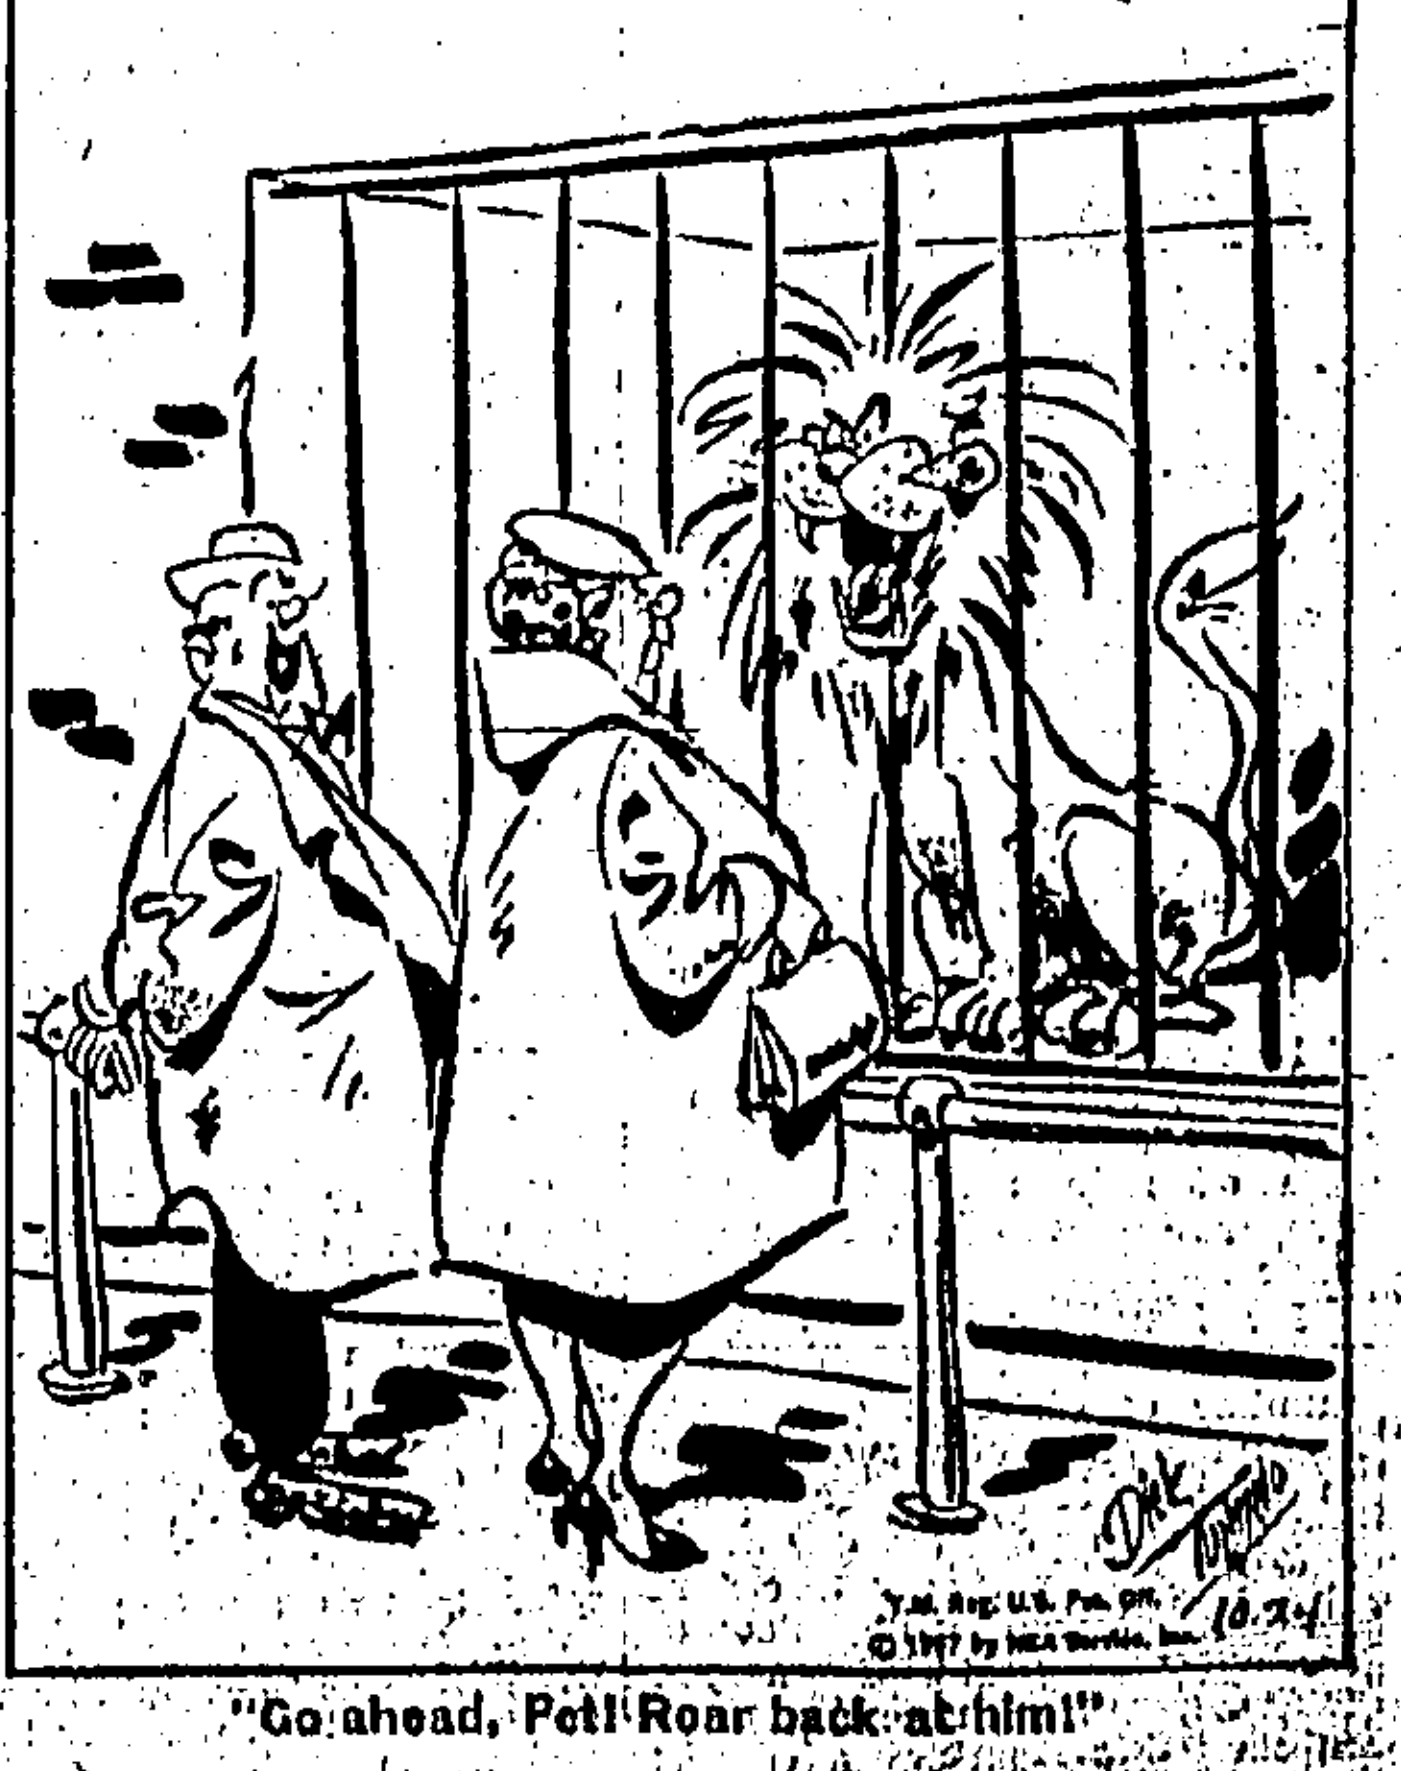

Inspector C.L. Smith said the Police raided the rear portion of 25 Morrison Hill Road, third floor, on October 17 and found the heroin in several small packets.

Acting on information, the Police arrested Ma in a tea house in Johnston Road on October 20.

Ma, who pleaded guilty, admitted having four previous convictions of the same nature. In mitigation, he said he had an aged mother to support.

The sentence was ordered to be dated from the day of arrest.

WHO WAS HE?

It must be remembered that Protestantism was a new fangled thing in those years, and few of the common people understood the dying off of the old faith.

The next events are highly mysterious. Guy Fawkes, on his reputation for daring devilry was allotted the actual task of firing the gun-powder. But before that could be done, the conspirators hired a house opposite Parliament; dug a tunnel as far as the walls of Parliament; gave it up and rented a cellar in Parliament. And Cecil, who had the finest spy system in Europe was supposed to know nothing about it.

The plot was revealed by a conspirator. He wrote a relation warning him not to attend the opening of Parliament. We shall never know the whole truth because it was not taken down.

Guy Fawkes had a premonition that the plot had been betrayed, nevertheless he returned to the cellar and mounted guard over the gun-powder with instructions to fire when the train at the first sign of danger. Here he was caught.

Guy Fawkes was a stubborn subject. He refused to disclose his name, or involve his companions.

He was taken to the rack, but again no evidence could be got out of him. Then he revealed a name, and then names, followed by more details. His confession was made on the rack, but unfortunately, no details are available. The confession as such was not entered at the trial. Sir Edward Coke, the Attorney-General revealed no details, but made a long rhetorical statement.

Disembowelled

The sentence for High Treason was savage. Guy Fawkes and his fellows were suspended until faint-conscious, taken down, and their entrails removed while they were still living. Their limbs were then lashed from their bodies.

The last picture we have of Fawkes is as he mounted the ladder to his execution. His body was so torn by the rack while he was under examination that he could scarcely move one leg in front of the other. Nor could he grip the rungs of the ladder with his hands as the hangman placed the rope around his neck. Yet he refused help, and died bravely.

Thus ended the Gunpowder plot, a typical dashing Elizabethan left-over, doomed to fail with the rise of the first professional statesmen of the calibre of Cecil.

An American's Romance In Moscow Ends Happily

Moscow, Nov. 4.

American lawyer Jan Sander, 42, last Saturday married Soviet hotel clerk, Victoria Kaksarova, 33, in Moscow, it was disclosed today.

Sander met his bride last year when he visited the Soviet Union with a group of American newspaper editors.

Victoria was working in the office of Moscow's "Moskva" Hotel.

After waiting six months for a visa to come back to Moscow to marry Victoria, Sander, a former U.S. Navy pilot, got his visa after sending letters to Soviet Communist Party First Secretary Nikita Khrushchev and former Soviet Defence Minister, Marshal Georg Zhukov.

The couple are awaiting Victoria's exit visa from the Soviet Union.

The U.S. Embassy in Moscow has stated that Victoria will have no difficulty in entering the United States with her husband. —France-Press.

SWEDEN TESTS A GUIDED MISSILE

Stockholm, Nov. 4.

Sweden has built a guided missile which is being tested by two destroyers, it was announced here tonight.

The missile, known as "Robot 315," is fired by a rocket and powered by a jet engine, and can hit a target in any kind of weather, the announcement said. It could be fitted with an atomic warhead if Sweden ever possesses atomic weapons.

Also being tested is a missile, "Robot 304," that can be fired from a plane, and work is being carried out on anti-aircraft missiles. —United Press.

Two Years

Miss Afrocaribe has recently finished a two years' engagement with the Folies Bergere and has entered into another contract to return there for another two years when she finishes in Hongkong.
